Apparently Emanating from Calais-Gris Nez Area of Occupied France—So Intense That Channel Is Illuminated from Coast to Coast—Lesser Blasts Heard
Few Hours Later and Shortly Before Allied Planes
Had Returned from France.

LONDON, Apr. 20 — (INS) — A mysterious explosion, one of the greatest heard on the English coast since the war began, rocked towns along the Dover Straits early today, apparently emanating in the Calais-Gris Nez area of occupied France.

The reverberating explosion, which occurred shortly before 1 a. m. (7 p. m. Wednesday EWT), was accompanied by great flashes of such intensity that they illuminated the Channel from coast to coast. Additional, lesser blasts were heard at 6 a. m.

Shortly before the first explosion was heard, Allied planes were heard returning from France, but there was no indication as to whether the blast had been set off by a delayed action bomb, or by some other medium.

Commenting on the record aerial onslaughts of Tuesday and Wednesday, which left Germany and the occupied lands battered and blazing, well-informed sources predicted that new blows soon to fall on the continent will dwarf even these onslaughts.

Although up to a late hour this morning there had been no word of any heavy attack against the continent last night, these sources expressed doubt that any brief breathing spell will give the Luft-

Sixth Ward Fire Siren Is Boon To 6th Ward Co.

The fire siren erected in the sixth ward atop a pole situated on the borough pumping station ground where Garfield and Hayes street meet, has proved most effective, and can be distinctly heard as far away as Green Lane and Beaver Dam road.

The 2½ h-p. siren was erected April 7th, and was the outcome of efforts on the part of Messrs. Conklin and Poffelt, who were named as heads of such a committee by Paul D. Brown, president of Bristol Volunteer Fire Co., No. 6, at a meeting of the company in the early part of the year.

The blowing of the siren for an alarm of fire has already proved a boon to sixth ward firemen, for as recently as the "Greene" signal tower fire, Monday night, it was instrumental in enabling the No. 6 company to fully man their apparatus and get to the scene in quick time, at which fire they connected to a locomotive tender and put their pumper to effective use.

The erection of this siren is expected to spur the membership of the No. 6 company on to erect their proposed building directly across from the siren somewhat earlier than was anticipated. The building committee of the company expects to be able to give figures regarding the cost of the erection of the proposed building at the next meeting of the company on May 4th.

There are now three fire sirens in Bristol. One is located at Good Will fire station in Third Ward; one at the municipal fire station, Pond and Mulberry streets, resulting in a wide distribution of the alarms.

McDevitt-Cliver Nuptial Ceremony Is Solemnized

The marriage of Miss Catherine Cliver, of Mount Holly, N. J., and Mr. Edward McDevitt, of 661 New Buckley street, occurred on Saturday afternoon at five o'clock in St. Mark's rectory. The Rev. Fr. Albert Glass officiated.

Attendants of the couple were Miss Kathleen Cook, Camden, N. J., a cousin of the bride; and Mr. Joseph McDevitt, a brother of the groom.

Following a reception at the home of the groom's parents, which 35 guests attended, Mr. and Mrs. McDevitt left for New York City for a short honeymoon. They are residing at 661 New Buckley street.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. John Cliver, Mt. Holly; and Mr. McDevitt is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James McDevitt, New Buckley street.

NEW HOPE GIRL LEAVES STAGE TO JOIN WAVES

Joan Carter Mortimer, 20,
Had Promising Career
On the Screen

TO AID WAR EFFORT

Joan Carter Mortimer, 20-year-old New Hope girl, has given up a promising career as a motion picture actress to join the WAVES because, she says, "I wanted to play an active part in the war."

Miss Mortimer acted a leading role in "Henry Aldrich Haunts a House," was assigned other roles in Paramount's Henry Aldrich pictures and received a seven-year contract from the Paramount Company. She entered the movies via the legitimate stage and was rehearsing the leading role in a Los Angeles production of the play, "Junior Miss," when she was given her first movie part.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Mortimer of Annandale Farms, New Hope. She attended school at Doylestown, Pa., and was graduated from the Grier School of Birmingham, Pa., in 1941, after which she studied at the American Academy of Dramatic Art in New York City. She has an uncle and a cousin who are sergeants in the Army and another cousin who is an electrician, first class, in the Navy.

These messages of warning are conveyed by former German officers now in Moscow who formed the Free German Committee and who speak over the Freies Deutschland sender, under the direction of the Soviet Government.

36TH WAS HARD LUCK DIVISION OF WAR

Had Received Its Battle
Baptism At "Bloody Salerno"

CASUALTIES TERRIFIC

(This is the second in a series of five articles by Graham Hovey, International News Service war correspondent, a front-line reporter's analysis of the Allied efforts to date to reduce Cassino. Today's article concerns the ill-fated attack of the American 36th Division across the Rapido River, which actually launched the battle for Cassino on January 19.)

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN ITALY—(Delayed). Apr. 20—(INS)—On Wednesday night, the 15th of January, the American 36th Division, which received its battle baptism at Bloody Salerno, launched the attack which almost clinched for it the title, "Hard Luck Division of the War."

In 48 terrible hours, the unit called "the Texas Division" suffered casualties comparable to the total for the entire Fifth Army task force over an 11-day period at Salerno.

Hunsberger Cows Among Nation's Top Producers

PLUMSTEADVILLE, Apr. 20—Two registered Holstein cows in the herd owned by George M. Hunsberger were among the nation's top producers in official herd test according to a revised list of national Holstein production leaders reported by The Holstein-Friesian Association of America.

Belle Crest Kent Della, as she is officially known, has produced 19,551 pounds of butterfat from 19,551 pounds of 4.9% milk in 365 days. This record places her at the head of the class for senior 4-year-olds milked twice daily.

Belle Crest Kent Alto is the nation's second highest producing senior 2-year-old on a twice-a-day milking schedule. In 328 days this cow produced 605.5 pounds of butterfat from 16,430 pounds of 3.7% milk.

All herd test leaders make their records in herds in which every cow is on test. The 11,776 cows completing official records in the 1943 herd test year averaged 399.6 pounds of butterfat from 11,435 pounds of 3.49% milk. This is more than twice the production of the average dairy cow in the nation.

BRISTOL BOY IS 'PLANE CREW MEMBER

Earl Hibbs Mentioned In Feature Article In Chicago Sun

IS GANGLY BOY

"Somehow the gangly, Bristol, Pa., boy crowds himself into the narrow quarters of the bow gunner."

This reference to A.M.M. 3/c Earl Hibbs, 19, appears in a feature article in the Chicago Sun of April 14th, entitled "When a Sub Fights Back Someone Gets Hurt," written by William J. Humphreys.

The youthful member of the particular Liberator crew in question is doing his part in the battle against submarines as part of the Biscay U-Boat Patrol. High praise is meted out in the article for the entire crew of the Liberator O, which the locality is one.

The story from a U. S. Naval Air Base somewhere in England follows in part:

It isn't healthy for U-boats to come up these days—and nights—in the Bay of Biscay, but they have to and do. And when our Liberator's catch them at it, the battle's on.

If the sub crash dives, down go the depth charges where the swirling foam marks the spot to be X-ed out. If the sub elects to stay up and fight it out with its deck guns, somebody's bound to get hurt.

It takes an artful pilot to weave in and silence the U-boat's guns without flying home some wounded or dead crewmen. But if the depth charges are laid right, you can count on the submarine and forget about the plane for a moment.

When the charges go off, it is like Niagara in reverse. We dropped one, but over-zealously. Unfortunately for the Battle of Atlantic, the effect was merely scenic.

A snow-white, foamy pillar leaped out of the sea like a reyser. It climbed up and up. Still, it was evident that if a U-boat had been caught in that agonized element, its back would have been broken on the surface; its hull mashed flat as a pancake if submerged.

As frenzied water seeks its level again, a circle boils up and widens.

To be the right kind, it must be the font of an ever-widening smear of thick crude oil, preferably with pieces of wreckage bobbing around in it and with tiny figures of men clinging to them.

That's what the naval airmen like

No Trace Is Found Of Two Missing Boys

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Apr. 20—No word has been received as yet from two lower Bucks County boys who have been missing from their homes since Monday noon, according to the mother of one residing here.

The two in question are: Donald Mook, 13, son of Erwin J. Mook, Sr., M.M. 1/c, and Mrs. Mook, of Cornwells Heights; and Robert Lawyer, 14, of near Newportville.

According to Mrs. Mook, her son had been suspended from seventh grade classes at the public school here. "As punishment I was keeping him at home, forbidding him to have company or to leave the premises," she stated. "On Monday morning Robert Lawyer came to the house to see Donald. Robert was enthused because he had intercepted a letter mailed by the school authorities to his mother, telling of his suspension. Robert had gotten on the school bus as usual that morning carrying his lunch so his mother would think he was bound for school. Instead he came here to see Donald. Robert wouldn't go home when I told him to, so I telephoned school authorities but they could do nothing about it."

"I am busy serving lunches at my tap room at noon-time and I didn't have much time," says Mrs. Mook. "At 12:10 Donald came in and told me Robert had gone home. I then told my boy to wait until I was finished serving the men and I would give him his lunch. When I called him later he was not about. A neighbor child told me that Donald and another boy had run down the road. I awakened my older son, Erwin, and he made a search, but the boys were not to be found. Then I noticed the Pennsylvania State Police."

When he left home Donald was wearing blue corduroy trousers and dark blue sweater. Robert wore brown corduroy trousers and a lumberjacket. Neither boy wore a hat.

Searches have been made of unoccupied estates and the sand pits in the Echo Beach section, where the boys have been in the habit of playing, states Mrs. Mook. Yesterday afternoon she found near the sand pits a school book belonging to Robert, whom she says has run away from home before according to information given her by Lawyer's mother. "The boys with others play war games near the sand pits, and we thought they might be hanging out in that section," states Mrs. Mook.

Whether the boys had any money with them at the time is not known.

Education Council Has Post-War Plan

HARRISBURG, Apr. 20—(INS)—A newly-appointed committee of the State Council of Education was ready today, following its initial conference, to prepare Pennsylvania to meet post-war educational needs.

Dr. Francis B. Haas, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, announced that the post-war planning committee, formed at the request of the Pennsylvania Post-War Planning Commission, recently took preliminary steps toward a peacetime educational program at its first formal discussion.

Representatives from 18 academic organizations and members of the planning commission attended the meeting, which was presided over by Commission Director Mark S. James and Dr. Haas. A large part of the convention was devoted to organizing committees for surveying educational problems arising from the war.

Dr. Haas expressed satisfaction with the initial accomplishments of the newly-born committee and with the participation of other scholastic groups "in such constructive and timely thinking."

"We are glad," he said, "for the opportunity to co-operate in the arduous task of achieving, as largely as possible, within our Commonwealth a rapid and successful readjustment to the unusual and pressing demands certain to arise from the aftermath of our present sustained total war effort."

TRUTH FROM THE SKY

Several times recently the United States censorship has passed reports that the Army is laying down a barrage of leaflets during its raids over Germany. The essence of the argument thus presented to the German people is that Hitler is costing the German army thousands of unnecessary casualties by his bad judgment, and that German sea and air warfare is not keeping the United States from landing hundreds of thousands of American soldiers in Europe.

The great advantage of this American propaganda is that it is true. The American propaganda experts have only to tell what has happened and what is happening to back up their forecasts of German defeat. These messages are bound to be impressive.

Hitler's great propaganda advantage early in the war was in the fact that true communiques demoralized the French and to some extent the British. His reports during the occupation of Poland and the western European nations were believed in this country, although denied by French and British communiques, because they were true.

In time, the Germans are sure to sense the truth of the American messages. Probably they already believe they are true, at least to the extent of proving that Hitler's propaganda is not true. As the iron ring closes in on Germany, this propaganda, if carefully held to fact, may overpower the Nazis in their battle to control civilian morale.

WHITHER THE CIGAR

The cigar smoker who has been experiencing difficulty in obtaining good cigars at prices consistent with survival as a member of the middle class will be delighted to hear that cigars are becoming scarcer. The individual who craves enjoyable cigars at reasonable prices is happy only when such products are abundant or absolutely nonexistent. To be plagued forever by the presence of new brands, some of which turn out to be ashes in his mouth before they become ashes themselves, is to endure a life of misery.

The most ecstatically happy upon hearing the news of greater scarcity will be those who work in office or factory with optimistic men who go on searching for good cigars and bring their quarry to them, only to set at naught all the latest improvements in air-conditioning and scientific ventilation. Many a man over the draft age has learned something of the horror of war merely by sitting at his desk and breathing the acrid fumes from the cigar of an associate.

The spiritually-minded make the most of such conditions and hope that through patiently forbearing this peculiar type of suffering they will lessen to that extent the punishment awaiting them in the next world for their own misdeeds.

Of course, it is still possible to obtain remarkably good cigars, but gregarious males, it seems, never want to pay the price. Many a smoker would still be buying nickel cigars if there were any available.

36th Was Hard Luck Division of War

ion's disaster, which occurred on the banks of the Rapido River below Italian Highway No. 6, and in the flat valley to the west of that swollen stream, could not be told at the time for obvious security reasons. It will bear telling now because it helps to explain our failure to capture Cassino to date.

Objectives of the 36th attack probably were two: to pin down a substantial German force in the Cassino area which otherwise could have rushed to Anzio to fight the Fifth Army amphibious forces after the landings of January 22, and to push far enough forward to keep small arms fire off the riverfront, so that engineers could construct a bridge for tanks there.

The attack could not have lasted long enough to achieve its first objective assuming that the enemy might have wanted to withdraw any force from the Cassino area at the time; it goes without saying that it failed completely to achieve the second goal.

The attack ended in disaster because the 36th Division had to push head-on against intricate defensive positions which the Germans had started in September and completed in November. These positions were supported with extensive minefields and barbed wire. Trees which would have blocked the lines of fire from these positions to the river front had been chopped down weeks before the attack.

Another reason for the failure was the lack of surprise. The enemy apparently knew within one kilometer where the two Rapido crossings would be attempted.

Elements of five battalions got across the river at one time or another during the 48 hours—three of them above the village of San Angelo and two below that point.

Some were almost completely wiped out after being caught in murderous machinegun crossfire and heavy mortar fire. The rest were battered heavily before the effort was called off and small groups of soldiers began to drift back to the American lines, swimming the icy river in most cases.

There were many episodes of heroism and valiant fighting; some of the 36th Division doughboys managed to penetrate the barbed wire defenses and close in for hand-to-hand combat with the enemy; one company commander radioed back that his unit was pinned down so that further advances were impossible, but that the men intended to stay where they were and shoot it out; they did and none of them was ever seen again.

The German defenses would have been formidable enough without a river in the way. With the swollen Rapido to cross before they could really begin to fight, the men of the 36th faced an assignment that looks impossible, in retrospect.

Nine days after the start of the 36th Division's attack, a regiment of the American 34th Division, aided by a battalion of tanks commanded by Lieut. Col. Harry W. Sweeting of Auburn, N. Y., crossed the Rapido in the rough country

The 34th Division's attack succeeded where the 36th attack failed because it was made in a different type of terrain and because the tanks were able to make a crossing of the river; completely surprise the enemy, and furnish devastating close artillery support for the doughboys.

If the normally high-spirited 36th had been fresh and up to strength so that one of its regiments could have passed through the tiring 34th and exploited the break-through, the battle for Cassino might have terminated around the first of February. It is the opinion of some observers that even one fresh battalion, at one stage of the fight, could have completed the job.

Eventually, what was left of the 36th was sent back into the line on Mt. Castellone to protect the 34th Division's right flank. One of the 36th Division regiments repelled a stiff German counterattack during that phase of the fight for Cassino.

But the battered Texas Division, with most of its battalions down to company size, was incapable of contributing materially to the offensive "punch" needed to complete the job at Cassino.

It had expended itself in one of the bloodiest battles of the Italian campaign after launching an attack which military history may cite as one of the tactical blunders of the Second World War.

24 Men of Bucks Co. Scout Dis'ts Complete Course

Fryckberg, William Kisters, Herbert Pettit, Sr., Herbert Pettit, Jr., Harry Hoffman, Jr.

The projects included fire making in the rain under adverse conditions; tracking, camp fire leadership, compass, wilderness, first aid, bird study, astronomy, and troop leadership. This week-end training followed a period of six, two-hour evening sessions, throughout the county in a course that was directed by Sol A. Miller, council training chairman; and Raymond W.

Hoxworth, scout executive.

It is one of the most comprehensive courses which has been conducted in scout training for many years and has prepared the men for a much better job as leaders in the troops. The plans will be made for a similar course to be conducted in the North Penn and Delaware River district of the Council.

Beginning on Friday evening, April 21st, at the Salem Reformed Church at eight o'clock. A training course for cub leaders, den mothers and cub parents will begin. The course will be personally conducted by Raymond W. Hoxworth, Scout executive, and will include all the material that is available from the National Council Cubbing Division. It is planned to have those who take the Doylestown course, conduct similar courses for new cub groups and present cub groups throughout the entire Bucks County area in the next few months. This course is the outcome of a cub conference which was held in Doylestown several months ago, at which time the national director of cubbing, William C. Wessell, met with a group of 30 cubbers of the council and presented the cub program as it is to be carried out in this area. It is expected that this course will do a great deal toward furthering the work of the entire cub program in the county. The chairman of the cub planning committee is Fred Schmidt. The cub course however will be under the direction of Sol A. Miller, of Langhorne, the Council chairman of training.

A Model is Murdered ~ BABS LEE

SYNOPSIS

A mysterious assassin cut short the gay career of Syria Verne, artist's model, just as she was answering the telephone in her penthouse apartment to which she had returned soon after midnight following a quarrel with Pierre Sturges, art photographer. The police could find no gun, significant fingerprints, nor other evidence of an intruder. The evening of the murder, Syria had met an old friend, Argus Steele, author and former detective, in the Penguin Club where he was dining with Ellen Curtis, a model. Syria left, accompanied by Sturges. Bill Carstairs, 111, playwright, introduced his latest drama, Dorry, to Ellen and Argus. Later, Ellen found Dorry in the "Red" room, weeping because her Bill "was phoning that awful Syria Verne again." Ellen noticed a snubbed revolver in Dorry's open purse. . . . Next morning, Ellen phoned Argus to tell him that Syria had been murdered. Police Inspector Grange visited Steele as the investigation got under way. Later, Ellen introduced Argus to Roger Plagg, in the latter's model agency. After discussing the late Syria from several angles, Plagg invites Argus to examine his office files, remarking that "I won some money playing poker last night and I'd like to take you two to lunch."

CHAPTER NINE

"I just ate breakfast," Argus said, "but I could be talked into a martini."

"Before sundown, Argus? I'm ashamed of you!" exclaimed Ellen. "Well, it's sundown in some places on the globe," drawled Argus. "It just depends on what time you go by. Personally, I'm on Chinese Eastern Standard."

"On, I forgot," said Ellen. "I have a 12:30 appointment. Could I take a rain check on that invitation?"

"Sure," Plagg agreed. "Any time. But come back here before you leave."

Ellen and Argus left the office. She led the way to a large room with wide windows. Four girls were sitting behind one desk. The desk had ten telephones on it.

"Those are the girls who make the appointments for us," Ellen explained. "When a photographer calls up and asks for Miss So-and-so, the girls write on the model's chart the hour of the appointment and what clothes she's to bring. Then they notify the model herself. Each girl has her own chart with her name on it. You can see them hanging on that wall behind them." The girls at the desk seemed to be answering two phones at once. One, after they beckoned to Ellen. She walked over to the desk.

"Don't forget you've got a fashion show at four this afternoon at the Park Hotel," she reminded her. "And bring along evening shoes and spectator sports."

"Thanks," said Ellen. She took a little book out of her purse. It had her name on the cover. Inside was a memorandum pad with every quarter hour marked on it from morning until night. She flipped over a couple of pages and made a notation.

"Where is Syria's chart?" Argus asked. "Have they taken it down yet?"

"Let's see," Ellen looked under the Vs. "No, there it is. Gosh, she had a busy schedule today! She had four appointments. One of them was with Pierre Sturges. She certainly did a lot of work for him."

Some models drifted in to check up on their appointments. One of them was a tall, broad-shouldered young man with collar-ad features.

"Hello, Tom! How's tricks?" was Ellen's greeting.

"Okay," said Tom. "How goes it with you?" Ellen replied with another affirmative cliché and the conversation ended. She returned to Argus.

"Looks as though I have some real competition there," he said. "That's a good looking boy."

"That's a good looking boy," he said.

"They register with Mr. Plagg and have some pictures of the commercial type made. Then they spend weeks wearing out shoe leather, taking them to photogthings. He tumbled through the book until he came to the page with Syria's picture on it. One was a reproduction of a magazine cover; another revealed her voluptuous figure clad in bra and shorts.

"I can only find one telephone number under all these pictures," Argus observed, disappointedly.

"Naturally, my gay colleague! It's the office number. You didn't expect to find their home phones and addresses, did you?"

"Well—I had hoped—" Argus confessed.

"Those numbers are never given out."

"Looks as though there's a lot of competition in this business," Argus said. "How do these girls get their start?"

"They register with Mr. Plagg and have some pictures of the commercial type made. Then they spend weeks wearing out shoe leather, taking them to photog-

"Hello, Tom! How's tricks?" Ellen greeted the handsome model.

Ellen laughed. "They're scintillating conversationalists," she said. "The gay renegade you just heard was typical. What these boys are interested in mainly is getting in the movies. I'll show you the book now."

"The book?" Argus queried.

"Yes, Mr. Plagg puts out a book with all his models' pictures in it and gives it to the advertisers and photographers." The book—really a model's catalogue—was several inches thick. There must have been about four hundred photographs in it. Under each were the models' measurements and general description.

Argus turned several pages thoughtfully as he gazed at the glamour girls that graced them. Full face and profile views were shown. Most of the girls were in fashion poses, although some appeared in bathing suits and underraphers, advertising agencies and so on.

"What I'd like to know is what the models carry around in those hatboxes. I'm always running into them in the midtown section. Do they change headgear in midstream?"

"Sometimes," said Ellen, "but usually they contain changes of clothes—shoes, hosiery, bathing suits, evening dresses or whatever the job may call for. That's the most expensive outfit for a model. Clothes and hairdressing bills. They have to have spring hats in January and winter hats in July. Fur coats and suits are photographed in the good old summer time and bathing suits in the winter. Fashion is always six months ahead of itself."

Today's Quiet Moment (By the Rev. James R. Galley) Pastor Bristol Presbyterian Church

Cleanse Thon our minds, Dear Father, and cause us to meditate on things divine. Remove from our hearts all carnal desires, and place within us the keen desire to behold the light of Thy countenance. Take away from us all detracting influences, all things which stand between us and a better understanding of Thy will. Give unto us direction in both thought and action, that the meditations of our hearts and the deeds of our bodies may be acceptable in Thy sight, O God. In the Name of Christ we pray. Amen.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE
In all of Roy Rogers' Republic pictures, a prominent feature is the melodies, merriment and high jinks created by the famous Sons of the Pioneers cowboy band, widely popular throughout the land for their personal appearances as well as their recordings.

The band, which Rogers helped to organize years ago, is considered tops in its field, and many of its numbers are regarded classics of American folk-lore. Some of these numbers are presented for the first time in "Hands Across the Border," which is currently showing at the Bristol Theatre.

GRAND THEATRE

"Great books make great pictures!"

That's an old Hollywood axiom, but never has it been so aptly illustrated as at the present time by 20th Century-Fox which has scheduled for forthcoming release pictureizations of many of the outstanding properties in the literary world.

All this is brought to mind by the fact that it is 20th Century-Fox that has just brought to the screen Charlotte Bronte's celebrated novel that has held literally millions of readers enthralled, "Jane Eyre."

Since it was first published, "Jane Eyre" has had one of the most remarkable book 'histories' in this country.

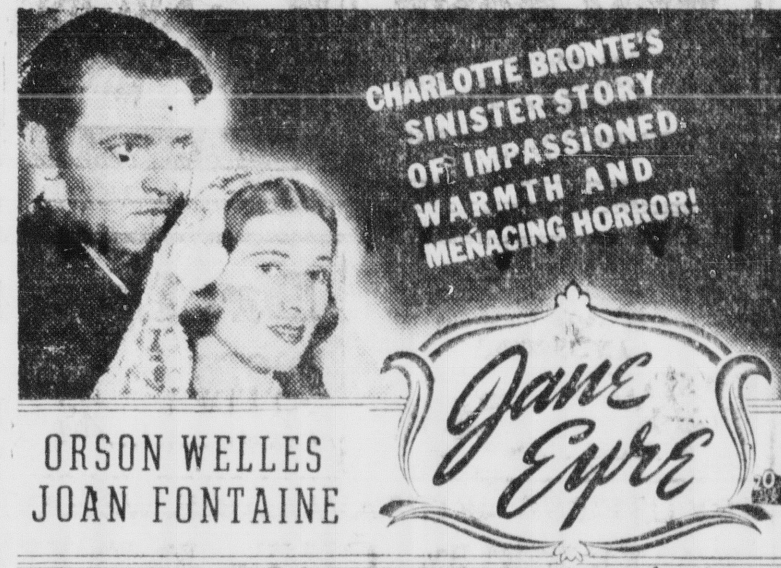

The phenomenal total of 43 editions has been published, capped by the fact that no less than four new editions are appearing simultaneously with the release of the motion picture, which is slated today at the Grand Theatre.

RITZ THEATRE

A thorough understanding of English psychology is brought to "Sherlock Holmes in Washington," Universal's latest detective thriller starring Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce. Director Roy William Neill was responsible for this valuable contribution to the film which is now at the Ritz Theatre.

"Always a Bridesmaid" is the other attraction.

Bristol Boy Is Plane Crew Member

to see. It's better to watch something like that than to be watched plummeting into the sea like a flaming torch. Fourteen Navy Liberator, since the patrols started last September, are missing. Maybe the JUSs got a few and maybe just had weather got others. But the U-boats just have had a few successes too.

We were called early in the morning for our leg of the patrol. We had breakfast in the dazingly-mess near the operations room. With the cooks, standing around in their tall white chefs' caps and blinking like ourselves in the overly-strong brilliance, it was something like these tile-walled hamburger stands back home, where the counter-men receive a solitary guest in the early hours before dawn with a sort of dull, suspicious resentment.

Cooks are moody guys. Anyway, in our bulky flying suits, parachute harness and good spirits, we seemed to be as suspect as a restaurant customer whose caging eye had lingered too long on the cash register. It was a good breakfast, though.

Whatever the chefs thought of men who go flying, dying before cocker, they couldn't have produced better fried eggs for anybody. The fare was a good foundation for the briefing.

Before the towering map of the Atlantic and the Bay, dotted with various symbols marking the position of surface and airborne craft of friend and foe, the intelligence officer informed us an Allied plane had been shot down earlier that night, just a little to the east of our course.

We were to keep a sharp lookout for a dinghy.

We did. But it was another Liberator's luck to find the crew huddled in the tiny raft in all that waste of sea.

Ourselves, we maintained patrol, dodged JUSs twice—once when our lookout reported 17 targets around us—and saw the coast of Spain looking as if it hadn't experienced much of a war, either.

Perhaps our luck in that latter respect was due entirely to the expert piloting of Lt. Mark Soden, 27, of 4652 N. Lake dr., Milwaukee. Before the University of Wisconsin graduate started patrolling Biscay Bay with co-pilot Lt. James C. H. Davis, 23, of 377 Benjamin av., S. E., Grand Rapids, he sold dairy products manufactured in Chicago by Cherry-Burrell. Davis went to the University of Michigan; Ensign Eugene J. Martin, 28, the Hauptstadt (Ind.) navigator, graduated from the university of his home state.

All Big Ten arguments have been scrapped for the duration, in the interests of the crew. Counting the three officers, there are seven of them who are deepwater men from the Middle West.

A.O.M. 2/c John B. Popp, Jr., 24, was a lathe operator in an Aurora (Ill.) steel mill before he joined the Navy.

Harvey Einhart is the kid of the crew, just 18. He chose war instead of finishing high school back in Clyde, Ohio. He is an A.M.M. 3/c and expert gunner like all the crew.

A.M.M. 2/c Robert Lagemann, 21, the flight engineer, was a farmer in Cook, Neb. A.R.M. 2/c Anthony Schwarber, 23, is a wireless operator as is A.R.M. 2/c Alfred J. Matthews, 24. Schwarber's home is at 4108 Lowry av., Norwood, Ohio. Matthews' home is at 18 West st., Milton, Mass.

Schwarber was a chemical mixer in a dye factory; Matthews was serving an apprenticeship in his father's contracting business.

A.M.M. 1/c John Bradford, 24, was a surveyor in Charlotte, N. C., before he became flight captain of reliable "B for Baker," our Lib, and its vital looker-outer. A.M.M. 3/c Earl Hibbs, 19, completed the crew. Somehow the gangly, Bristol (Pa.) boy crowds himself into the narrow quarters of the bow gunner.

And like all the bomber crews I have ever met, they are a team of damned good guys.

62 New Church Members Are Reception Guests

EDDINGTON, Apr. 20—Members and friends of Eddington Presbyterian Church gathered on Tuesday evening for a reception tendered the new members who have affiliated with the church during the past year.

The affair was held in the church house which was gaily decorated with spring flowers. The honored guests were seated at small tables in the center of the room.

The Gamble Concert Company, of Langhorne, provided delightful entertainment. The evening opened with prayer by the Rev. Arthur D. Sargis, after which words of welcome were expressed by C. Burnley White. Ernest Gamble then led group singing.

Mr. Gamble then favored with two solos: "Oh Give Me the Sword" and "The Woeing." A duet was sung by the Misses Virginia Whyatt and "Betty" Donnelly, entitled "Carmina." As an encore they sang "Comin' 'Round the Mountain."

Two violin solos followed by Verna Paige, "The Old Refrain" and "Scotch Lullaby." Two soprano solos were rendered by Sylvia Merrill, "The Bell Song" and "Gentle Annie."

The gathering was addressed by the Rev. Mr. Sargis and Mr. White. "Perpetual Motion" and "A Wild Rose" were rendered on the violin by Verna Paige; "Summertime" from "Porgy and Bess," sung by Sylvia Merrill; "Shortest," sung by Sylvia Merrill and Ernest Gamble. The evening ended with the entire gathering singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name."

Refreshments were served. Sixty-two names have been added to the church roll during the past church year. They are: Mrs. Bessie E. Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. Reese Thomas, Jr., Mabel H. Mitchell, Mildred G. Underwood, PFC Patrick E. Dunlavey, Jr., Walter Dallas, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon A. Kuehnhold, A/S Robert W. Edelman, Jean M. Edelman, Joan M. Edelman, Joseph F. Edelman, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph P. Barclay, Ralph P. Barclay, Jr., Mrs. Charles G. Bauer, Mrs. Addie M. Schwinn, Florence D. Mitchell.

Edna H. Barclay, Mrs. Edwin G. Angel, Jean N. Angel, Mrs. William E. Underwood, Mrs. Harry G. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace H. Chapman, Helen I. Beegle, S. 1/c; Dorothy L. Wilke, Mrs. Joseph Ludwig, Cpl. Clifton E. Robtoy, William F. Kisters, Harry P. Kisters, Mrs. William Rhode, PFC Wilbur H. Smith, Jr., Mrs. Wilbur H. Smith, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Baas, Pvt. "pomes," and recess games kept things lively for the evening; and "Professor Moyer" decided he had the prize group of the nation's spellers when third grade words were given out with two dozen spellers shown to their seats in short order.

The affair was in the form of a reception for new members.

The men of the association provided the refreshments in the cafeteria, consisting of "hot dogs," sauer kraut and rolls, coffee, ice cream and crackers.

The business meeting was in charge of Mrs. Willard Bartoe, with Mrs. Charlotte Walsh in charge of records. Mrs. Herbert Rongley reported that a check for $97.71 had been received from the government toward the cafeteria meals. The serving of lunches will be discontinued after this month. John Crowley stated that suggestion had been made that house-wives donate some canned goods to the cafeteria for next term. Charles Herman gave the report of condition of the treasury.

Howard Johnson, reporting for the maintenance committee, told that the electric stove in the cafeteria is in poor condition. It was further reported that some new elements have been ordered for the same. Ned Moyer, Roger Burns and Mr. Crowley also reported on the meeting of the maintenance committee with the school board. A committee of school board members was recently named to work with the P. T. A. maintenance committee in regards to cafeteria needs.

The association will sponsor a round-up next month for girls and boys who will commence school next September, a physician being engaged for the group check-up.

The association agreed to be represented on the Presidents' Council in this area. Mrs. Bartoe to represent the P. T. A. at sessions where various civic matters will be considered. The areas covered as Middletown Township, Hulmeville, Langhorne, South Langhorne and Langhorne Manor borough.

Tuberculosis Society To Have X-Ray Clinic

p.m. weekdays. The X-rays will be taken on Wednesday, May 3rd, at the Doylestown high school. Reports will be sent to the family physician.

Chest X-rays have hitherto been a rare luxury, but are now becoming everyday routine. No one in the 1920's dreamed that by 1944 X-rays of the chest would be taken at the rate of two a minute, millions a year.

The Society is finding two tubercular cases out of every 100 adults X-rayed. Tuberculosis is becoming an increasing war and post-war problem. The only way to discover early tuberculosis is to X-ray apparently healthy people, for early tuberculosis is apt to be without the familiar symptoms.

Tuberculosis is not inherited. People are not born with it. When there are several cases in a family, the germs have been passed from one who has the disease, by means of spitting, uncovered coughing or sneezing, or from objects handled by a tubercular person and thus peppered with germs.

Tuberculosis germs can live a long time away from the body, even after drying or freezing. But they don't multiply until they have a warm, moist place within our tissues. Sunlight kills them in a few hours, boiling in a few minutes, burning kills them at once.

Often people carry germs of tuberculosis, but with good resistance they never gain control. A time of lowered resistance allows the germs to sneak up silently.

Anybody can get tuberculosis, but nobody need get it. Tuberculosis is curable. Many more people recover from it than die of it. Neglect, ignorance, or delay make it a killer.

The fight is being won against tuberculosis. It used to lead as the cause of death up to the early 1900's. Now it is seventh. No sensible person, however, wants to be one of the 60,000 in this.

our daily breakfasts. Here are a combinations that will prove delightful—and very nutritious.

Crispy Baked Eggs
1 tablespoon melted butter
2 cups Pot Toasties (corn flakes)
6 eggs
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper

Pour butter over corn flakes and toss lightly to distribute butter evenly. Arrange corn flakes to form a nest in each section of large cupcake pan. Break eggs carefully, slipping one into each nest. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Bake in slow oven (325 degrees F.) 20 minutes, or until eggs are firm. To serve, loosen with knife and lift out gently onto plate. This may also be baked in greased shallow baking dish. Place corn flakes in bottom of pan; make 6 depressions; and break an egg in each. Serve with bacon or ham. Makes 6 servings.

Crispy Baked Eggs with Cheese: Mix 1/2 cup grated American cheese with corn flakes and butter, or sprinkle on tops of eggs before baking.

Crispy Tomato Baked Eggs: Place 1 tablespoon tomato ketchup or 2 tablespoons tomato soup in each nest of corn flakes before adding eggs.

Note: Bacon drippings may be substituted for butter.

A Model is Murdered -- BABS LEE

SYNOPSIS

A mysterious assassin cut short the gay career of Syria Verne, artists' model, just as she was answering the telephone in her penthouse apartment to which she had returned soon after midnight following a quarrel with Pierre Sturgis, art photographer. The police could find no gun, significant fingerprints, nor other evidence of an intruder. The evening of the murder, she had met an old friend, Argus Steele, author and former detective, in the Penguin Club where he was dining with Ellen Curtis, a model. Syria left, accompanied by Sturgis. Bill Carstairs, III, playboy, introduced his latest blonde, Dorry, to Ellen and Argus. Later, Ellen found Dorry in the ladies' room, weeping because her Bill Verne again. Ellen noticed a snub-nosed revolver in Dorry's open purse. Next morning, Ellen phoned Argus to tell him that Syria had been murdered. Police Inspector Grange visited Steele as the investigation got under way. Later, Ellen introduced Argus to Roger Flagg in the latter's model agency. Flagg invited Argus to examine his office files and Ellen acts as guide in showing Argus the routine and records of the model agency. They note Syria's chart; she had four appointments for that day, one of them with Pierre Sturgis.

CHAPTER TEN

Argus watched Ellen as she talked. There was a tonic quality in her very appearance, he thought. "Syria ever get chummy with any of the girls she worked with?" he asked.

"No. She was the silent, mysterious type."

"But she must've been seen around. I thought all these glamour girls were always being taken to fancy dives by fancy boy friends." "She may have," said Ellen. "Seems to me I did hear a rumor that Syria had some man on the string, but I never learned who it was—aside from Sturgis, of course."

"How was she liked generally?" "The girls didn't understand her. I don't think they disliked her, but she wasn't exactly friendly with anyone." Ellen paused. "I've been thinking about Dorry—you remember—the girl Bill Carstairs was with in the Penguin club? Ever since I heard about Syria's being shot, I've worried about that gun Dorry was carrying."

"Maybe she was going to use it on Carstairs," Argus suggested. "It would have been a temptation." "She seemed plenty burned up about Bill's phoning Syria. Did the police mention either of them in connection with the murder?"

"No."

A man with a camera under his arm approached them. In his wake was the indignant receptionist. "Here!" she called. "You can't barge in here like that without Mr. Flagg's permission. What do you think this is?" The cameraman ignored her and smiled at Argus as though he were a bosom friend.

"I heard you were here, Argus."

old boy," he said familiarly. Steele had never seen the man before. "I'm still on the Blade—you remember." He winked at Argus broadly. "I just want to get some shots of you with some of these models." He turned. There were four girls coming up behind him. The receptionist shrugged a gesture of hopelessness and returned to her duties.

"I've never seen you before, and I'm not at all sure that I'm going to work on this case," Argus said. "Sure, I know. But give me a break, will you? I was sent up here to get a picture of the office and Mr. Flagg and the girls. I find you here—one of the greatest gun-shooters in the business. It's a natural, isn't it?" He began to adjust his camera. "Now girls stand over here by Mr. Steele and sort of drape yourselves around. You too, sister." He motioned to Ellen. She tried to hide a grin.

The girls clustered around Argus. "That's it," said the bulb-bomber. "Get closer. Look at Mr. Steele and smile. Put your arm around 'em, Mr. Steele." Two of them, a blonde and a brunette, snuggled against him. Argus frowned—a mock frown, to be sure.

"Look pleasant, Mr. Steele. Maybe you don't want any publicity, but think of these girls here. It's going to help their careers." He winked again.

"How's this?" Argus asked, grinning, his arms full of models. "That's it," said the photographer. A flash bulb exploded in their faces. Argus blinked. The girls laughed.

"What's going on here?" Flagg asked, coming into the room.

"Just taking a few pictures for the Blade," the lens ranger replied. "I'd like to get a shot of you with these models."

"Sorry," said Flagg. "Some other time."

"But, just one—"

"No," declared Flagg.

"Oke!" grinned the youth with a shrug. "Thanks, Mr. Steele," he said. "Much obliged, girls." He put away his camera and left.

"What time is it?" Ellen asked. Flagg glanced at his wrist. It was bare.

"I must've forgotten my watch today," he said.

"It's ten after twelve," answered Argus.

"I'll have to dash," said Ellen. "My appointment—Oh, by the way, you're coming to the fashion show this afternoon aren't you, Argus?"

It's at the Park Hotel at four. Meet me outside the models' dressing room and I'll give you a ticket."

"Now what would I do at a fashion show?"

"They are highly educational," said Ellen. "Aren't they, Roger?"

And besides, there are going to be some bathing-suit numbers."

"Well—in that case—" faltered Argus.

"I'll see you there, then," said Flagg. "I'm to be one of the judges."

As Argus came out of Flagg's building he saw Inspector Grange emerging from a police car several doors down the block.

"Well," said Argus, coming up to him, "this seems to be my day for running into the law. Where are you bound for?"

"Hello!" greeted Grange, shoving his hat back on his head. "I was just getting around to paying a little call on Mr. Sturgis."

"So? Mind if I join you? I'm getting quite interested in this modeling business." Grange looked doubtful. "Well, what are we waiting for, Inspector? Come on." He took Grange's arm and propelled him across the sidewalk.

"Now listen, Steele, this isn't in the regulations. I—"

"Regulations. Rules. Are you man or sheep? If anybody asks any questions just tell 'em I followed you."

Reluctantly, Grange agreed. "Thinking of doing some investigating on your own hook in this case, Steele?" the Inspector asked as they stepped into an elevator.

"Maybe. Anything new on the case?"

"Sure," said Grange sourly. "I know what kind of toothpaste Syria Verne used, what she had for dinner Monday night and how many bras she owned, but as to who shot her—"

He shrugged.

Argus followed Grange through a frosted-glass door marked "Sturgis" in large gold letters. Inside, a sedate, bespectacled woman sat behind a switchboard.

"Mr. Sturgis here?" Grange asked.

"He's in conference," she said. "Well, tell him Inspector Grange wants to see him."

"Yes, sir." She eyed the police officer with approval, then turned to the switchboard and plugged in a line. Apparently there was no answer. She tried another line.

Argus heard her mumble something; then she turned to Grange and said: "Mr. Sturgis just stepped out for a minute. Will you wait?"

"Sure," declared Grange. "We'll wait."

"Mind if I have a look around the studio?" Argus asked.

"I suppose it's all right," answered the receptionist. "Mr. Sturgis' assistant, Paul, may be shooting a picture. I—"

"Thanks," said Argus. He walked as far as the door marked "Studio" and paused with his hand on the knob. "Want to join me, Inspector?"

"Might take a look around at that," said Grange. "But let me know the instant Mr. Sturgis returns," he cautioned the receptionist.

Inside the studio a number of bright lights, similar to the Kleigs used in Hollywood, were clustered together in one corner of the room. They threw a light of devastating brilliance on a raised platform that resembled a stage set. A beautiful blonde, with long wavy hair that hung down to her shoulders, wearing only a brassiere and panties, was seated on a red and white striped dais. She was about nineteen and her skin, under the lights, had a peaches-and-cream texture. One shapely leg was stretched out in front of her as she posed in the act of pulling up a sheer, silk stocking.

"I just want to get some shots of you with some of these models." He turned. There were four girls coming up behind him. The receptionist shrugged a gesture of hopelessness and returned to her duties.

"I've never seen you before, and I'm not at all sure that I'm going to work on this case," Argus said. "Sure, I know. But give me a break, will you? I was sent up here to get a picture of the office and Mr. Flagg and the girls. I find you here—one of the greatest gun-shooters in the business. It's a natural, isn't it?" He began to adjust his camera. "Now girls stand over here by Mr. Steele and sort of drape yourselves around. You too, sister." He motioned to Ellen. She tried to hide a grin.

The girls clustered around Argus. "That's it," said the bulb-bomber. "Get closer. Look at Mr. Steele and smile. Put your arm around 'em, Mr. Steele." Two of them, a blonde and a brunette, snuggled against him. Argus frowned—a mock frown, to be sure.

"Look pleasant, Mr. Steele. Maybe you don't want any publicity, but think of these girls here. It's going to help their careers." He winked again.

"How's this?" Argus asked, grinning, his arms full of models. "That's it," said the photographer. A flash bulb exploded in their faces. Argus blinked. The girls laughed.

"What's going on here?" Flagg asked, coming into the room.

"Just taking a few pictures for the Blade," the lens ranger replied. "I'd like to get a shot of you with these models."

"Sorry," said Flagg. "Some other time."

"But, just one—"

"No," declared Flagg.

"Oke!" grinned the youth with a shrug. "Thanks, Mr. Steele," he said. "Much obliged, girls." He put away his camera and left.

"What time is it?" Ellen asked. Flagg glanced at his wrist. It was bare.

"I must've forgotten my watch today," he said.

"It's ten after twelve," answered Argus.

"I'll have to dash," said Ellen. "My appointment—Oh, by the way, you're coming to the fashion show this afternoon aren't you, Argus?"

It's at the Park Hotel at four. Meet me outside the models' dressing room and I'll give you a ticket."

"Now what would I do at a fashion show?"

"They are highly educational," said Ellen. "Aren't they, Roger?"

And besides, there are going to be some bathing-suit numbers."

"Well—in that case—" faltered Argus.

"I'll see you there, then," said Flagg. "I'm to be one of the judges."

As Argus came out of Flagg's building he saw Inspector Grange emerging from a police car several doors down the block.

"Well," said Argus, coming up to him, "this seems to be my day for

"Hold it, now!" Paul commanded. "Smile! You haven't gotta run in it already. You're supposed to like the way the stocking looks. It's pretty, see?" The blonde's face registered an expression of pleased surprise.

"Swell!" he said. "Now, just hold the stocking top with the tips of your fingers, not your whole hand. That's it! Good! Now!"

"Tough way to make a living, eh?" Argus asked Grange.

"It don't seem quite decent to me." The Inspector shook his head dubiously. "Running around half naked!"

"O.K. Steady now! I'm going to take it." Paul slid a holder into the camera and squeezed a rubber ball he held in his hand that was linked to the camera by a long cord. "That's all for that," he told the girl. "Next!" he called.

The girl jumped off the platform and disappeared into the dressing room, as another took her place.

"Next" was a dark-haired girl with an oval face and very white skin. She was wearing a dress of gold lame that clung tightly to her figure. Paul helped her up on the platform.

"I'd like to paint her," Grange whispered. "She's a honey!"

The corner where Argus and the Inspector were standing was dark, and so far they had remained unobserved. The camera man had his back to them most of the time and the model, though facing them, was staring into the bright lights. She too had taken her seat on the dais, and, pulling up the hem of her evening gown to a point above the knee, she thrust one stocking limb outward and posed in the act of fastening her garter.

"That's good," said the cameraman. "Just hold that." He changed the lighting effects. "Now, lean over a little more. More still!"

"Takes quite a bit of electricity equipment to outfit a studio like this," Argus observed, noting the coils of rubberized wire that lay around the floor, and the huge plugs that connected them with the lights. "Must cost money."

"Great, Miss Lane!" exclaimed Paul. "We're going to take the shot now. Steady!" He took three pictures in rapid succession. "That's the good!" said the cameraman. "Just hold that." He changed the lighting effects. "Now, lean over a little more. More still!"

Remodeling Garments Challenges Homemaker

Every used garment is an individual problem when being remodeled. For this reason it is a challenge to the imagination and much more interesting than making a dress from several yards of new material.

"When you are ready to select your pattern, give it the thought it deserves," advises Edna R. Gray, University of Illinois college of agriculture. "In achieving style in dress, fitting is as important as design. Notice the shape of the pieces with which you will have to work. Jot down some of the measurements, if necessary. Allow plenty of time at the pattern counter. Read the information on the envelopes of the patterns in which you are interested. Examine the small cutting diagrams for each pattern to be found in the counter pattern books. Such study will usually tell you whether or not you can manage to cut that particular pattern from the material with which you are to work.

"If you think you may have to piece, look for a pattern which has small pieces and many seams. If you cannot find all the items you want in one pattern, look for two. For example, perhaps a coat of one and a skirt of another will suit your needs. Before buying two patterns, however, consider whether or not you might be able to alter the design of one pattern to make it like the other one. It is usually very easy to alter skirt designs. Do not expect to be able to follow any pattern in every detail. The principal structural lines, of course, should be followed or, at most, changed only slightly."

Expert Gives Seven Tips For Extending Suit's Life

To make our suits wear longer, keep ourselves better-groomed, and to lend Uncle Sam more money for munitions, seven tips for pressing wool as an aid to clothing conservation have been outlined by Helen S. Butler, home economics extension representative.

Press on the wrong side; use two pressing cloths—one of wool, the other of muslin or heavy cotton. Put the wool cloth on the garment, over this lay the damp cotton cloth. Pass the iron lightly over the wet cloth, following the grain of the material, but do not iron heavily. Pressing is not ironing. Lift the cloths while the steam is still rising. Pat the garment into shape with the hands.

Hold the iron over thick places, such as pockets, so the moisture penetrates the fabric. Stop pressing before all the moisture has left the fabric. Pressing until perfectly dry may make the material shiny. Let the garment dry thoroughly before hanging in the closet or wearing.

Dairy Feed

With good pasture, one pound of grain mixture is needed for each three pounds of milk over and above 30 pounds produced daily by Holsteins, Swiss and Ayrshires, experts say. For Jerseys and Guernseys, one pound of grain mixture for each three pounds of milk produced over and above 20 pounds daily may be fed. In early spring a mixture of corn and oats, ground, is satisfactory, but as soon as grass approaches maturity, supplements should be used to bring the protein content of the mixture up to 15 per cent. As the grass ripens, cows will eat less of it and it will be necessary to feed grain mixtures at a heavier rate. If pastures become low yielding, some extra roughage, such as green crops, silage or hay, may be needed.

Moisture in Home Healthful

The proper amount of moisture in your home during the heating months not only is important from a health angle, but it also protects and preserves rugs, furniture, and clothing. "Dry skin" of which women complain so often during the winter can be traced in most cases to insufficient humidity in their homes. During these warlike times, humidity is doubly important, for moist air is easier to heat than dry air—it actually feels warmer at lower temperatures. Which means you will not consume nearly so much coal in heating your home.

Fats and Oils

Fats and oils embrace one of the most keenly competitive groups of commodities in modern commerce. Sources of supply are legion, ranging throughout the animal, vegetable and marine kingdoms. Though no two are identical, great freedom of substitution is possible. In fact, one of the major results of technology has been the increase in interchangeability of the various fats and oils. Their principal markets are provided by the food, soap, paint, and varnish industries.

USO Busy

USO average club attendance exceeds 15,000,000 a month; 760,000 volunteers assist at USO programs; 7,244,000 pieces of USO stationery are used by men in uniform, sleeping accommodations at USO clubs are used 288,300 times; 1,283,600 information services are given; 61,240 sessions of organized recreational and social programs are held; and 108,000 servicemen receive personal counsel.

PERKASIE FIREMEN TO GET AMBULANCE

Large Sedan To Be Converted Into Vehicle for Ambulance Use

COST WILL BE $5,000

PERKASIE, Apr. 20 — Perkasio firemen, as well as the entire borough were agreeably surprised to learn that the Drive for a Community Ambulance had virtually attained its goal of $5,000 and in addition, a new 7-passenger Chrysler Imperial Sedan had been purchased, paid for and delivered to be converted into an ambulance. The equipment, necessary for the conversion, has been ordered and it is confidently believed that the ambulance will be put into service within thirty days.

This information was embodied in a report submitted at the monthly meeting of the Firemen. The Drive for $5,000 was begun on February 29th and the public response exceeded even the fondest hopes of the sponsors.

More than 80 per cent of the $5,000 has been received and there is every indication that with the big new car on display, new interest will be aroused and that by the time the ambulance goes into service the venture will be over-subscribed.

Twenty active members of the company are now in the armed forces and several interesting letters from firemen were read at the meeting.

On Monday evening twelve firemen collected more than five tons of waste paper in the first ward. The firemen appreciate the growing co-operation of residents in the collection of paper. Primarily, the project is purely a war effort, the proceeds go a long way in keeping the Fire Company treasury in a healthy condition. It was pointed out that the value of the paper collected Monday night exceeds $75.00. Residents are again reminded to watch for paper collection dates and to tie their waste paper in bundles to facilitate collections.

President Buntzer appointed a committee to have charge of the ambulance and draft an operating schedule.

A Digest of Things Political Occurring At Harrisburg

By International News Service
HARRISBURG, Apr. 20. (INS)—Although Gov. Edward Martin has received the assurances of Republican and Democratic leaders that political speeches will be avoided when the special session of the Legislature is convened May 1, the administration's desire for a harmonious meeting may be marred in another fashion. . . . Individual legislators may seek to place the Assembly on record with resolutions covering a variety of subjects. . . . The Governor's call, limiting the work of the Assembly, cannot be expanded but resolutions are not subject to this restriction. . . . A resolution was expected to be introduced calling upon the Federal Government to return control of the Unemployment Compensation Fund to the State. . . . The resolution probably will touch off some debate when introduced with Democrats lining up against adoption and the GOP supporting it.

Governor Martin's scrutiny of Federal payrolls and commitments has prompted him to report that there were 3,214,000 persons on U. S. Government payrolls in December 1943, an increase of 300,000 in 12 months. . . . "Today about one out of every 41 is a Federal employee and this does not include the men and women in the armed forces," he said.

The honor roll of 5751 State employees serving in the armed forces now bears 11 gold stars. . . . The names are printed on large glass-covered plaques that stand in the rotunda beneath a huge service flag bearing 67 blue stars, one for each county and one larger star representing the State. . . . The Department of Property and Supplies keeps the record up to date.

A series of one-day "county institutes" to draft local postwar plans have been planned by the Institute on Municipal Postwar Planning in cooperation with county commissioners. . . . Officials in the Department of Internal Affairs, which has supervised the Institute's conferences, expect the State group will meet to draft a master postwar plan for Pennsylvania. . . . The last of the regional meetings sponsored by the Institute will be held in Pittsburgh April 27 for western Pennsylvania Planning Agencies.

The Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, AFL, has rounded out 42 years of progress and claims the affiliation of 1190 labor unions and central labor bodies with a combined membership of 325,000 workers. . . . The Union was organized at Scranton in 1901 when charter members elected Hugh Frayne, of Scranton, president. . . . One of the first bills sponsored in the Legislature prohibited the employment of under-age youth in and around mines for more than eight hours a day and another making it a misdemeanor for unauthorized persons to wear union buttons.

Ideas For the Low-Point Menu

"O" stands for oranges. And ration points zero. Answers the question—"What to eat? Oh, dear, oh!"

"L" stands for lemons. They "lift up" the flavor. It's wartime. But menus can still keep their savor.

A cook's tour these days brings disappointments. Foods you planned to use just aren't in the grocer's shelves. Or they take points and you're resolved to use as few points as possible because you are lacking the nation's no-point, low-point food campaign. For you are Mrs. America, technical mess sergeant and cook and baker, first class, on the home front, planning culinary strategy to win health for your family in appetizing food.

What will you do, when you cannot find the foods you want? Chance your campaign plans, of course, and use something else. Oh yes! It's hard to do but it's your part of winning the war. And there's a satisfaction in attaining an objective, military or culinary.

A rule that's easy to follow is to plan meals around as many as possible of the fresh fruits and vegetables the markets display. They do not take ration points and they add health to your family's diet. The year 'round orange and lemon, for example, can be used to make meals more interesting, either served by themselves or with other foods. Lemon helps to perk up flavor and is a handy stand-in for that hard-to-find bottle of catsup or salad dressing.

The Government has asked us to use certain foods that are especially plentiful this spring. Among these are cabbage and eggs. Suggestions follow for the use of these foods with the healthful and flavorful citrus fruits.

California Cole Slaw
2 cups orange pieces
2 cups shredded cabbage
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon mustard
1 cup evaporated milk

Peel oranges and cut in pieces, to make 2 cups. Best for this purpose are the firm-meated seedless California oranges. Combine oranges with cabbage, which has been finely shredded. Mix lemon juice, salt and mustard. Stir slowly into milk. Use as a dressing for the orange and cabbage. Serve at once. (Serves 6.)

This dressing is a good sour cream dressing for other salads.

Lemon Cake Top Pudding
2 tablespoons flour
1/4 cup sugar
1 tablespoon margarine
2 eggs, yolks and whites separated
1/4 cup lemon juice
1 cup milk

Cream flour, sugar and margarine. Add beaten egg yolks, lemon juice and milk. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in an 8-inch unbuttered pudding dish or in individual custard cups, set in a pan of warm water. Bake 35 minutes in over 360 degrees to 375 degrees F. Will form a cake top with a layer of custard below. Serves 4 to 6.

This pudding can be made into a pie. Pour the uncooked mixture into an 8-inch pie shell, which has been baked 5 minutes in a hot oven (475 degrees F.). Finish by baking 45 minutes in moderate oven (325 degrees F.).

Lemon Butter for Meats
2 tablespoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons butter
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon parsley, finely chopped

Blend well. Serve on hot steak, chops or fish. An additional garnish of lemon quarters provides more tartness, if desired. Serves 4.

Chicken or Tongue Omelet
1 cup chicken or tongue
2 tablespoons fat
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup cream or milk
Salt and pepper

Chop the meat until it is very fine. Make a sauce of the fat, flour, and milk or cream. Add salt and pepper and chopped meat. Make a plain omelet and spread the meat mixture on it just before folding.

DOWN ON THE FARM

METUCHEN, N. J.—(INS)—Private John D. Benson, 22, left his father's farm at Alberville, Ala., to enter the army. Subsequently he was assigned to the Raritan Arsenal. A short time later his father, Charles E. Benson, appeared. "I couldn't run the farm without you," he explained, "so I sold it." Then the elder Benson went out and got a job so that he could be near his son.

INDIANA—(INS)—Dr. Ralph Helges, dean of Indiana State Teachers College, has warned that a belief that U. S. Economic and British political policy were the basic causes for the Pacific war was already taking root in America and that such a notion inclined toward a negotiated peace with Japan.

Faith Clarke's SHOPPING TIPS FOR BUDGETEERS

LET HIM BLOOM this springtime! True, his clothes generally are getting brighter and brighter, but ties are still his principal opportunity for expressing his love of color. He should have a double rackful to meet his moods, set a keynote for his day. The Snellenburg Tie Department (1st fl.) is famous among men, and the prices are from high to low. Imagine some very special ties of the moment—every one hand-tailored—at a mere 55c each! Four-leaf clovers, stripes, checks, solids, splashes. Buy him half a dozen while they last.

LET 'EM RIDE! They're here again—full-size bicycles for boys and girls! The child who can ride a bike lets off steam in the right direction. In better disposition, The Bicycle Dept. (3rd fl.) of the Snellenburg Store has some very special $27.88 models for a limited time. Made by the maker of famous Columbia bicycles, too! All in accordance with Government regulations—sturdy construction, steel frame, through-axle, coaster brakes, streamlined fenders, double inner-tube tires. Rationing ticket required for each.

HOUSECOAT ETIQUETTE. A housecoat can be glamorous or slovenly. The rule is to have at least three in personally becoming colors and in lines that fit. At the special price of $4.98 the Snellenburg Negligee Dept. (2nd fl.) has a Lazy Hour version in flower-printed rayons, the pattern multi-colored on red and blue grounds. Sizes 14 to 20, 38 to 44. Why not one of those, and then another of the many other models at various prices in this well-known department? The prettiest housecoat grows monotonous if seen too often.

HIS PIN-FORE GIRL can be you. Oddly enough, the men like the informality of these pretty, sleeveless, ruffled things. The Snellenburg Apron Dept. (2nd fl.) has some particularly fetching ones of printed and checked cottons for a mere $1.79. Wear them over dresses, for protection, or wear them without dresses for a feeling of freedom and coolness—can't wear 'em. If you're in the teens or early twenties, they'll bear casual street-wearing. Some of these Snellenburg models have sweetheart necks, heart-shaped pockets, bowed sashes! Charming!

AUTOMATIC NURSE! A simple playpen is the greatest of help to mothers of creeping or just-walking children. Some nice roomy ones, very special, can be had in the Infants' Furniture Dept. (2d fl., Chestnut St.) of the Snellenburg Store. I hope you young mothers and grandmothers are in time for one. Even if your "babies" top you by inches, isn't there some mother of little ones you know who can't afford to buy a playpen? If so—well, put two and two together. Give! Priced at $10.95, these roomy pens are well constructed of sturdy wood, finished in natural color. Floored, of course.

FURS DRAMATIZE a spring or summer costume. Nor need they be expensive this year. For a brief time, Snellenburgs are offering handsome "bassariak" shoulder-warmers—similar to sable in nature, dyed brown, at but $15.75 a skin, tax included! Sable, dyed luscious squirrel is but $10 a skin, tax included. Arranged in three to four skins. Natural wild and ranch mink, $27.50 per skin, tax included. Fur Salon, 2nd fl.

SPIRITED FEET. Buy a spring shoe having a lift. Every shoe rack should have at least one pair of shoes that flatter. The new spring "Scotties" can be had, for a time, at a lowered price—$4.85 instead of $5.85, to be exact, in patent, patent-and-gabardine, black calf, brown calf. Many versions of closed and open-toe pumps, and step-ins and ties. "Scotties" have a reputation for comfort, too. The Snellenburg Shoe Dept., 1st fl.

KNOW YOUR STATE

In Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, Pennsylvania has two of the ten largest cities in the Nation. No other state has two cities among the first ten. This does not mean, however, that Pennsylvania's population is unduly concentrated.

Pennsylvania has also more small cities and towns than any other state. It has five cities of 100,000 or more, eleven with a population of between 50,000 and 100,000, twelve between 25,000 and 50,000, seventy-five between 10,000 and 25,000, 112 between 5,000 and 10,000, 140 between 2,500 and 5,000, and in addition contains 640 towns and villages of less than 2,500 population. The Keystone State has also a larger number of people residing in small towns than is true anywhere else in our Nation.

We commonly think of New England as a section of our country notable for the number of its towns and villages, but in the number of places under 10,000 Pennsylvania has five and one-half times as many—the exact numbers being 892 such communities in Pennsylvania and 162 in all New England.

It might be concluded from these figures that Pennsylvania's population dwelt entirely in cities, towns and villages, but this would be far from true. Only Texas has as great a rural population as the industrial Commonwealth of Pennsylvania where 2,728,085 were living in unincorporated territory at the time of the taking of the 1940 Census.

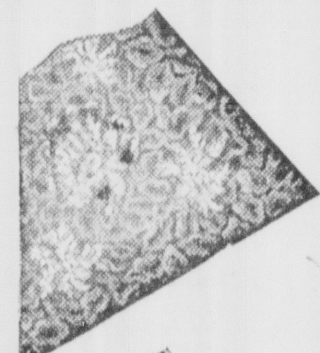

CARLISLE—(INS)—Capt. Leonard L. Cowley, of St. Paul, Minn., now stationed at the Carlisle Medical School, likes to tell the story of what happened when he was stationed at a foreign base. Imagine his surprise, he said, when an English transport landed and out stepped the King of England, General Montgomery and General Alexander for a routine inspection of North African bases.

MYSTERIOUS EXPLOSION, ONE OF THE GREATEST HEARD ON ENGLISH COAST, ROCKS TOWNS ALONG DOVER STRAITS

Apparently Emanating from Calais-Gris Nez Area of Occupied France—So Intense That Channel Is Illuminated from Coast to Coast—Lesser Blasts Heard
Few Hours Later and Shortly Before Allied Planes
Had Returned from France.

LONDON, Apr. 20.—(INS)—A mysterious explosion, one of the greatest heard on the English coast since the war began, rocked towns along the Dover Straits early today, apparently emanating in the Calais-Gris Nez area of occupied France.

The reverberating explosion, which occurred shortly before 1 a. m. (7 p. m. Wednesday EWT), was accompanied by great flashes of such intensity that they illuminated the Channel from coast to coast. Additional, lesser blasts were heard at 6 a. m.

Shortly before the first explosion was heard, Allied planes were heard returning from France, but there was no indication as to whether the blast had been set off by a delayed action bomb, or by some other medium.

Commenting on the record aerial onslaughts of Tuesday and Wednesday, which left Germany and the occupied lands battered and blazing, well-informed sources predicted that new blows soon to fall on the continent will dwarf even these onslaughts.

Although up to a late hour this morning there had been no word of any heavy attack against the continent last night, these sources expressed doubt that any brief breathing spell will give the Luft-

Sixth Ward Fire Siren Is Boon To 6th Ward Co.

The fire siren erected in the sixth ward atop a pole situated on the borough pumping station ground where Garfield and Hayes street meet, has proved most effective, and can be distinctly heard as far away as Green Lane and Beaver Dam Road.

The 2½ h.p. siren was erected April 7th, and was the outcome of efforts on the part of Messrs. Conklin and Pollett, who were named as heads of such a committee by Paul D. Brown, president of Bristol Volunteer Fire Co. No. 6, at a meeting of the company in the early part of the year.

The blowing of the siren for an alarm of fire has already proved a boon to sixth ward firemen, for as recently as the "Greene" signal tower fire, Monday night, it was instrumental in enabling the No. 6 company to fully man their apparatus and get to the scene in quick time, at which fire they connected to a locomotive tender and put their pumper to effective use.

The erection of this siren is expected to spur the membership of the No. 6 company on to erect their proposed building directly across from the siren somewhat earlier than was anticipated. The building committee of the company expects to be able to give figures regarding the cost of the erection of the proposed building at the next meeting of the company on May 4th.

There are now three fire sirens in Bristol. One is located at Good Will fire station in Third Ward; one at the municipal fire station, Pond and Mulberry streets, resulting in a wide distribution of the alarms.

McDevitt-Cliver Nuptial Ceremony Is Solemnized

The marriage of Miss Catherine Cliver, of Mount Holly, N. J., and Mr. Edward McDevitt, of 661 New Bucklev street, occurred on Saturday afternoon at five o'clock in St. Mark's rectory. The Rev. Fr. Albert Glass officiated.

Attendants of the couple were Miss Kathleen Cook, Camden, N. J., a cousin of the bride; and Mr. Joseph McDevitt, a brother of the groom.

Following a reception at the home of the groom's parents, which 35 guests attended, Mr. and Mrs. McDevitt left for New York City for a short honeymoon. They are residing at 661 New Bucklev street.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. John Cliver, Mt. Holly; and Mr. McDevitt is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James McDevitt, New Bucklev street.

NEW HOPE GIRL LEAVES STAGE TO JOIN WAVES

Joan Carter Mortimer, 20, Had Promising Career On the Screen

TO AID WAR EFFORT

Joan Carter Mortimer, 20-year-old New Hope girl, has given up a promising career as a motion picture actress to join the WAVES because, she says, "I wanted to play an active part in the war."

Miss Mortimer acted a leading role in "Henry Aldrich Haunts a House," was assigned other roles in Paramount's Henry Aldrich pictures and received a seven-year contract from the Paramount Company. She entered the movies via the legitimate stage and was rehearsing the leading role in a Los Angeles production of the play "Junior Miss," when she was given her first movie part.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Mortimer of Annandale Farms, New Hope. She attended school at Doylestown, Pa., and was graduated from the Grier School of Birmingham, Pa., in 1941, after which she studied at the American Academy of Dramatic Art in New York City. She has an uncle and a cousin who are sergeants in the Army and another cousin who is an electrician, first class, in the Navy.

These messages of warning are conveyed by former German officers now in Moscow who formed the Free German Committee and who speak over the Freies Deutschland sender, under the direction of the Soviet Government.

36TH WAS HARD LUCK DIVISION OF WAR

Had Received Its Battle Baptism At "Bloody Salerno"

CASUALTIES TERRIFIC

(This is the second in a series of five articles by Graham Hovey, International News Service war correspondent, a front-line reporter's analysis of the Allied efforts to date to reduce Cassino. Today's article concerns the ill-fated attack of the American 36th Division across the Rapido River, which actually launched the battle for Cassino on January 19.)

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN ITALY—(Delayed), Apr. 20.—(INS)—

On Wednesday night, the 19th of January, the American 36th Division, which received its battle baptism at Bloody Salerno, launched the attack which almost clinched for it the title, "Hard Luck Division of the War."

In 48 terrible hours, the unit called "the Texas Division" suffered casualties comparable to the total for the entire Fifth Army task force over an 11-day period at Salerno.

Hunsberger Cows Among Nation's Top Producers

PLUMSTEADVILLE, Apr. 20.—Two registered Holstein cows in the herd owned by George M. Hunsberger were among the nation's top producers in official herd test according to a revised list of national Holstein production leaders reported by The Holstein-Friesian Association of America.

Belle Crest Kent Della, as she is officially known, has produced 80.1 pounds of butterfat from 19,954 pounds of 4.0% milk in 365 days. This record places her at the head of the class for senior 4-year-olds milked twice daily.

Belle Crest Kent Alto is the nation's second highest producing senior 2-year-old on a twice-a-day milking schedule. In 328 days this cow produced 605.5 pounds of butterfat from 16,430 pounds of 3.7% milk.

All herd test leaders make their records in herds in which every cow is on test. The 11,776 cows completing official records in the 1943 herd test year averaged 399.6 pounds of butterfat from 11,435 pounds of 3.49% milk. This is more than twice the production of the average dairy cow in the nation.

BRISTOL BOY IS 'PLANE CREW MEMBER

Earl Hibbs Mentioned In Feature Article In Chicago Sun

IS GANGLY BOY

"Somehow the gangly, Bristol, Pa., boy crowds himself into the narrow quarters of the bow gunner."

This reference to A.M.M. 3/c Earl Hibbs, 19, appears in a feature article in the Chicago Sun of April 14th, entitled "When a Sub Fights Back Someone Gets Hurt," written by William J. Humphreys.

The youthful member of the particular Liberator crew in question is doing his part in the battle against submarines as part of the Biscay U-Boat Patrol. High praise is meted out in the article for the entire crew of the Liberator 6, which the locality is one.

The story from a U. S. Naval Air Base somewhere in England follows in part:

It isn't healthy for U-boats to come up these days—and nights—in the Bay of Biscay, but they have to do it. And when our Liberators catch them at it, the battle's on.

If the sub crash dives, down go the depth charges where the swirling foam marks the spot to be X-ed out. If the sub elects to stay up and fight it out with its deck guns, somebody's bound to get hurt.

It takes an awful pilot to weave in and silence the U-boat's guns without flying home some wounded or dead crewmen. But if the depth charges are laid right, you can count on the submarine and forget about the plane for a moment.

When the charges go off, it is like Niagara in reverse. We dropped one, but over-zealously. Unfortunately for the Battle of Atlantic, the effect was merely scenic.

A snow-white, foamy pillar leaped out of the sea like a geyser. It climbed up and up. Still, it was evident that if a U-boat had been caught in that agonized element, its back would have been broken on the surface; its hull mashed flat as a pancake if submerged.

As frenzied water seeks its level again, a circle boils up and widens.

To be the right kind, it must be the font of an ever-widening smear of thick crude oil, preferably with pieces of wreckage bobbing around in it and with tiny figures of men clinging to them.

That's what the naval airmen like

No Trace Is Found Of Two Missing Boys

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Apr. 20.—No word has been received as yet from two lower Bucks County boys who have been missing from their homes since Monday noon, according to the mother of one residing here.

The two in question are: Donald Mook, 13, son of Erwin J. Mook, Sr., M.M. 1/c, and Mrs. Mook, of Cornwells Heights; and Robert Lawyer, 14, of near Newportville.

According to Mrs. Mook, her son had been suspended from seventh grade classes at the public school here. "As punishment I was keeping him at home, forbidding him to have company or to leave the premises," she stated. "On Monday morning Robert Lawyer came to the house to see Donald. Robert was enthusiastic because he had intercepted a letter mailed by the school authorities to his mother, telling of his suspension. Robert had gotten on the school bus as usual that morning carrying his lunch so his mother would think he was bound for school. Instead he came here to see Donald. Robert wouldn't go home when I told him to, so I telephoned school authorities but they could do nothing about it."

"I am busy serving lunches at my tap room at noon-time and I didn't have much time," says Mrs. Mook. "At 12:10 Donald came in and told me Robert had gone home. I then told my boy to wait until I was finished serving the men and I would give him his lunch. When I called him later he was not about. A neighbor child told me that Donald and another boy had run down the road. I awakened my older son, Erwin, and he made a search, but the boys were not to be found. Then I notified the Pennsylvania State Police."

When he left home Donald was wearing blue corduroy trousers and dark blue sweater. Robert wore brown corduroy trousers and a amberjacket. Neither boy wore a hat.

Searches have been made of unoccupied estates and the sand pits in the Echo Beach section, where the boys have been in the habit of playing, states Mrs. Mook. Yesterday afternoon she found near the sand pits a school book belonging to Robert, whom she says has run away from home before according to information given her by Lawyer's mother. "The boys with others play war games near the sand pits, and we thought they might be hanging out in that section," states Mrs. Mook.

Whether the boys had any money with them at the time is not known.

MEN SERVE A REPAST

HULMEVILLE, Apr. 20.—The last-rooms of Hulmeville public school building resounded last evening to the shuffling of feet, the ruck of the teacher's ruler, shrieks which accompanied the pulling of pig-tails, and howls of glee when practical jokes were "pulled" on teacher or pupils. The event was a "School Days" program participated in to full measure by all of the 50 women and men attending the April meeting of the Hulmeville-Middletown Parent-Teacher Association. The business meeting was brief in order to afford the grown "pupils" to "let off steam" which manifest itself at the moment they entered the door garbed in knickers, rompers, short skirts, air-ribbons, and bearing apples, flowers, etc., for teacher who in this case was Ned Moyer.

The "bright" pupils were advanced to the head of the class, while the dull one was provided with a dunce's cap and a seat on the platform. The recitation of lessons, voluntary recitation of

TRUTH FROM THE SKY

Several times recently the United States censorship has passed reports that the Army is laying down a barrage of leaflets during its raids over Germany. The essence of the argument thus presented to the German people is that Hitler is costing the German army thousands of unnecessary casualties by his bad judgment, and that German sea and air warfare is not keeping the United States from landing hundreds of thousands of American soldiers in Europe.

The great advantage of this American propaganda is that it is true. The American propaganda experts have only to tell what has happened and what is happening to back up their forecasts of German defeat. These messages are bound to be impressive.

Hitler's great propaganda advantage early in the war was in the fact that true communiques demoralized the French and to some extent the British. His reports during the occupation of Poland and the western European nations were believed in this country, although denied by French and British communiques, because they were true.

In time, the Germans are sure to sense the truth of the American messages. Probably they already believe they are true, at least to the extent of proving that Hitler's propaganda is not true. As the iron ring closes in on Germany, this propaganda, if carefully held to fact, may overpower the Nazis in their battle to control civilian morale.

WHITHER THE CIGAR

The cigar smoker who has been experiencing difficulty in obtaining good cigars at prices consistent with survival as a member of the middle class will be delighted to hear that cigars are becoming scarcer. The individual who craves enjoyable cigars at reasonable prices is happy only when such products are abundant or absolutely non-existent. To be plagued forever by the presence of new brands, some of which turn out to be ashes in his mouth before they become ashes themselves, is to endure a life of misery.

The most ecstatically happy upon hearing the news of greater scarcity will be those who work in office or factory with optimistic men who go on searching for good cigars and bring their quarry to them, only to set at naught all the latest improvements in air-conditioning and scientific ventilation. Many a man over the draft age has learned something of the horror of war merely by sitting at his desk and breathing the acrid fumes from the cigar of an associate.

The spiritually-minded make the most of such conditions and hope that through patiently forbearing this peculiar type of suffering they will lessen to that extent the punishment awaiting them in the next world for their own misdeeds.

Of course, it is still possible to obtain remarkably good cigars, but gregarious males, it seems, never want to pay the price. Many a smoker would still be buying nickel cigars if there were any available.

ion's disaster, which occurred on the banks of the Rapido River below Italian Highway No. 6, and in the flat valley to the west of that swollen stream, could not be told at the time for obvious security reasons. It will bear telling now because it helps to explain our failure to capture Cassino to date.

Objectives of the 36th attack probably were two: to pin down a substantial German force in the Cassino area which otherwise could have rushed to Anzio to fight the Fifth Army amphibious forces after the landings of January 22, and to push far enough forward to keep small arms fire off the riverfront, so that engineers could construct a bridge for tanks there.

The attack could not have lasted long enough to achieve its first objective, assuming that the enemy might have wanted to withdraw any force from the Cassino area at the time; it goes without saying that it failed completely to achieve the second goal.

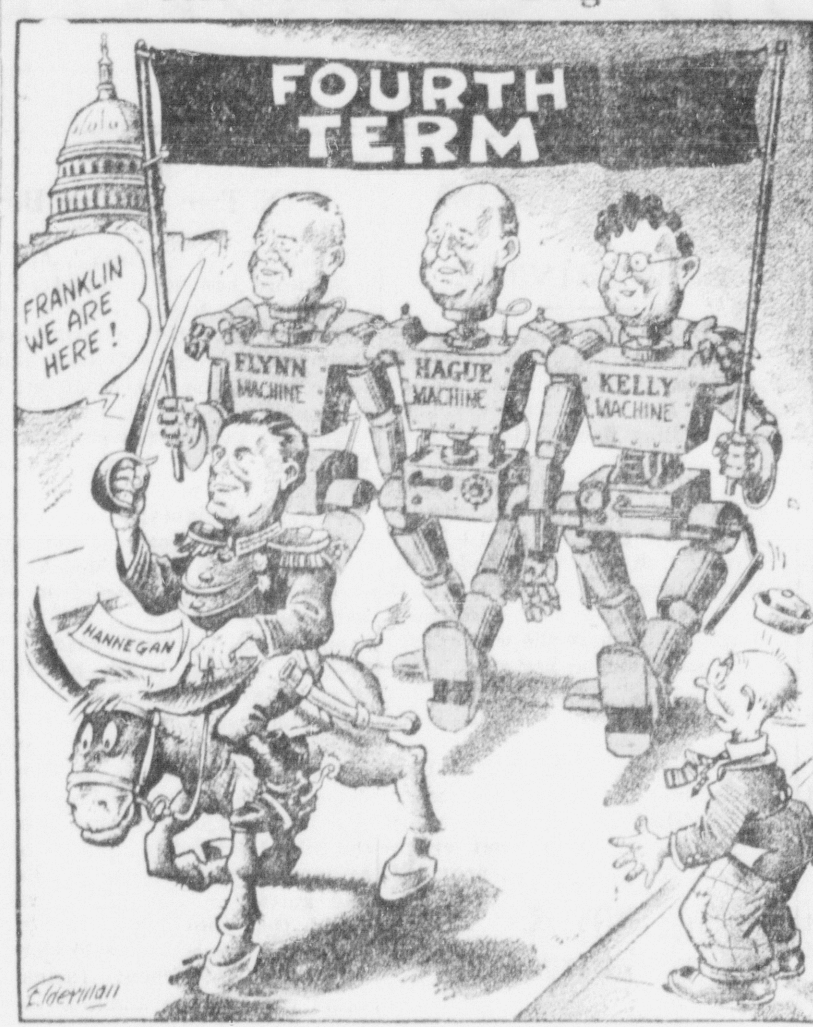

The attack ended in disaster because the 36th Division had to push head-on against intricate defensive positions which the Germans had started in September and completed in November. These positions were supported with extensive minefields and barbed wire. Trees which would have blocked the lines of fire from these positions to the river front had been chopped down weeks before the attack.

Another reason for the failure was the lack of surprise. The enemy apparently knew within one kilometer where the two Rapido crossings would be attempted.

Elements of five battalions got across the river at one time or another during the 48 hours—three of them above the village of San Angelo and two below that point. Some were almost completely wiped out after being caught in murderous machinegun crossfire and heavy mortar fire. The rest were battered heavily before the effort was called off and small groups of soldiers began to drift back to the American lines, swimming the icy river in most cases.

There were many episodes of heroism and valiant fighting; some of the 36th Division doughboys managed to penetrate the barbed wire defenses and close in for hand-to-hand combat with the enemy, one company commander radioed back that his unit was pinned down so that further advances were impossible, but that the men intended to stay where they were and shoot it out; they did and none of them was ever seen again.

The German defenses would have been formidable enough without a river in the way. With the swollen Rapido to cross before they could really begin to fight, the men of the 36th faced an assignment that looks impossible in retrospect.

Nine days after the start of the 36th Division's attack, a regiment of the American 34th Division, aided by a battalion of tanks commanded by Lieut. Col. Harry W. Sweeping of Auburn, N. Y., crossed the Rapido in the rough country

The 34th Division's attack succeeded where the 36th attack failed because it was made in a different type of terrain and because the tanks were able to make a crossing of the river, completely surprise the enemy, and furnish devastating close artillery support for the doughboys.

If the normally high-spirited 36th had been fresh and up to strength so that one of its regiments could have passed through the tiring 34th and exploited the break-through, the battle for Cassino might have terminated around the first of February. It is the opinion of some observers that even one fresh battalion at one stage of the fight could have completed the job.

Eventually, what was left of the 36th was sent back into the line on

Mt. Castellone to protect the 34th Division's right flank. One of the 36th Division regiments repelled a stiff German counterattack during that phase of the fight for Cassino. But the battered Texas Division, with most of its battalions down to company size, was incapable of contributing materially to the offensive "punch" needed to complete the job at Cassino.

It had expended itself in one of the bloodiest battles of the Italian campaign after launching an attack which military history may cite as one of the tactical blunders of the Second World War.

Fryckberg, William Kisters, Herbert Pettit, Sr., Herbert Pettit, Jr., Harry Hoffman, Jr.

The projects included fire making in the rain under adverse conditions; tracking, camp fire leadership, compass, wilderness, first aid, bird study, astronomy, and troop leadership. This week-end training followed a period of six, two-hour evening sessions, throughout the county in a course that was directed by Sol A. Miller, council training chairman; and Raymond W.

Hoxworth, scout executive.

It is one of the most comprehensive courses which has been conducted in scout training for many years and has prepared the men for a much better job as leaders in the troops. The plans will be made for a similar course to be conducted in the North Penn and Delaware River district of the Council.

Beginning on Friday evening, April 21st, at the Salem Reformed Church at eight o'clock. A training course for cub leaders, den mothers and cub parents will begin. The course will be personally conducted by Raymond W. Hoxworth, Scout executive, and will include all the material that is available from the National Council Cubbing Division. It is planned to have those who take the Doylestown course, conduct similar courses for new cub groups and present cub groups throughout the entire Bucks County area in the next few months. This course is the outcome of a cub conference which was held in Doylestown several months ago, at which time the national director of cubbing, William C. Wessell, met with a group of 30 cubbers of the council and presented the cub program as it is to be carried out in this area. It is expected that this course will do a great deal toward furthering the work of the entire cub program in the county. The chairman of the cub planning committee is Fred Schmidt. The cub course however will be under the direction of Sol A. Miller, of Langhorne, the Council chairman of training.

American fliers, with their deadly precision bombing of aircraft production centers and their heavy toll of Nazi planes shot down in combat, were credited with leaving the once-dreaded Luftwaffe erogry. It now appears as if Nazi aerial commanders are intent upon conserving their remaining strength, even at the cost of leaving many vital targets undefended, these sources declared.

A Model is Murdered ~ BABS LEE

SYNOPSIS

A mysterious assassin cut short the gay career of Syria Verne, artist's model, just as she was answering the telephone in her penthouse apartment to which she had returned soon after midnight following a quarrel with Pierre Sturgis, art photographer. The police could find no significant finger-prints, nor evidence of an intruder. The evening of the murder, Syria had met an old friend, Argus Steele, author and former detective, in the Penguin Club where he was dining with Ellen Curtis, a model. Syria left, accompanied by Sturgis, Bill Carstairs, III, playwright, introduced his latest model, Dorry, to Ellen and Argus. Later, Ellen found Dorry in the "train" room, weeping because her Bill was phoning that awful Syria Verne again. Ellen noticed a snubbed revolver in Dorry's open purse. Next morning, Ellen phoned Argus to tell him that Syria had been murdered. Police Inspector Grange visited Steele as the investigation got under way. Later, Ellen introduced Argus to Roger Flagg, in the latter's model agency. After discussing the late Syria from several angles, Flagg invites Argus to examine his office files, remarking that "I won some money playing poker last night and I'd like to take you two to lunch."

CHAPTER NINE

"I just ate breakfast," Argus said, "but I could be talked into a martini."

"Before sundown, Argus? I'm ashamed of you," exclaimed Ellen. "Well, it's sundown in some places on the globe," drawled Argus. "It just depends on what time you go by. Personally, I'm on Chinese Eastern Standard."

"Oh, I forgot," said Ellen. "I have a 12:50 appointment. Could I take a rain check on that invitation?"

"Sure," Flagg agreed. "Any time. But come back here before you leave."

Ellen and Argus left the office. She led the way to a large room with wide windows. Four girls were sitting behind one desk. The desk had ten telephones on it.

"Those are the girls who make the appointments for us," Ellen explained. "When a photographer calls up and asks for Miss So-and-so, the girls write on the model's chart the hour of the appointment and what clothes she's to bring. Then they notify the model herself. Each girl has her own chart with her name on it. You can see them hanging on that wall behind them." The girls at the desk seemed to be answering two phones at once. One of them beckoned to Ellen. She walked over to the desk.

"Don't forget you've got a fashion show at four this afternoon at the Park Hotel," she reminded her. "And bring along evening shoes and spectator sports."

"Thanks," said Ellen. She took a little book out of her purse. It had her name on the cover. Inside was a memorandum pad with every quarter hour marked on it from morning until night. She flipped over a couple of pages and made a notation.

"Where is Syria's chart?" Argus asked. "Have they taken it down yet?"

"Let's see," Ellen looked under the "No there it is. Gosh, she had a busy schedule today! She had four appointments. One of them was with Pierre Sturgis. She certainly did a lot of work for him."

Some models drifted in to check up on their appointments. One of them was a tall, broad-shouldered young man with collar-and-features.

"Hello, Tom! How's tricks?" was Ellen's greeting.

"Okay," said Tom. "How goes it with you?" Ellen replied with an affirmative cliché and the conversation ended. She returned to Argus.

"Looks as though I have some real competition here," he said. "That's a good-looking boy."

"They register with Mr. Flagg and have some pictures of the commercial type made. Then they spend weeks wearing out shoe leather, taking them to photographers, advertising agencies and so on."

"What I'd like to know is what the models carry around in those hatboxes. I'm always running into them in the midtown section. Do they change headgear in mid-stream?"

"Sometimes," said Ellen, "but usually they contain changes of clothes—shoes, hosiery, bathing suits, evening dresses or whatever the job may call for. That's the most expensive outlay for a model. Clothes and head-dressing bills. They have to have spring hats in January and winter hats in July. Fur coats and suits are photographed in the good old summer time and bathing suits in the winter. Fashion is always six months ahead of itself."

"Hello, Tom! How's tricks?" Ellen greeted the handsome model.

Ellen laughed. "They're scintillating conversationalists," she said. "The gay repartee you just heard was typical. What these boys are interested in mainly is getting in the movies. I'll show you the book now."

"The book?" Argus queried.

"Yes, Mr. Flagg puts out a book with all his models' pictures in it and gives it to the advertisers and photographers." The book—really a model's catalogue—was several inches thick. There must have been about four hundred photographs in it. Under each were the model's measurements and general description.

Argus turned several pages thoughtfully as he gazed at the glamour girls that graced them. Full face and profile views were shown. Most of the girls were in fashion poses, although some appeared in bathing suits and underraphers, advertising agencies and so on."

In all of Roy Rogers' Republic pictures, a prominent feature is the melodies, merriment and high jinks created by the famous Sons of the Pioneers cowboy band, widely popular throughout the land for their personal appearances as well as their recordings.

The band, which Rogers helped to organize years ago, is considered tops in its field, and many of its numbers are regarded classics of American folk-lore. Some of these numbers are presented for the first time in "Hands Across the Border," which is currently showing at the Bristol Theatre.

to see. It's better to watch something like that than to be watched plummeting into the sea like a flaming torch. Fourteen Navy Librarians, since the patrols started last September, are missing. Maybe the JUSs got a few and maybe just had weather got others. But the U-boats just have had a few successes too.

We were called early in the morning for our leg of the patrol. We had breakfast in the dazzying mess near the operations room. With the cooks, standing around in their tall white chefs' caps and blinking like ourselves in the over-strong brilliance, it was something like these tile-walled hamburger stands back home, where the counter men receive a solitary guest in the early hours before dawn with a sort of dull, suspicious resentment.

Cooks are moody guys. Anyway, in our bulky flying suits, parachute harness and good spirits, we seemed to be as suspect as a restaurant customer whose caging eye had lingered too long on the cash register. It was a good breakfast, though.

Whatever the chefs thought of men who go flying, dying before cockerow, they couldn't have produced better fried eggs for anybody. The fare was a good foundation for the briefing.

Before the towering map of the Atlantic and the Bay, dotted with various symbols marking the position of surface and airborne craft of friend and foe, the intelligence officer informed us an Allied plane had been shot down earlier that night. Just a little to the east of our course.

We were to keep a sharp lookout for a dinghy.

We did. But it was another Liberator's luck to find the crew huddled in the tiny raft in all that waste of sea.

Ourselves, we maintained patrol, dodged JUSs twice—once when our lookout reported 17 targets around us—and saw the coast of Spain looking as if it hadn't experienced much of a war, either.

Perhaps our luck in that latter respect was due entirely to the expert plotting of Lt. Mark Soden, 27, of 4652 N. Lake Dr., Milwaukee. Before the University of Wisconsin graduate started patrolling Biscay Bay with co-pilot Lt. James C. H. Davis, 23, of 377 Benjamin av., S. E., Grand Rapids, he sold dairy products manufactured in Chicago by Cherry-Burrell, Davis went to the University of Michigan; Ensign Eugene J. Martin, 28, the Hauptstadt (Ind.) navigator, graduated from the university of his home state.

All Big Ten arguments have been scrapped for the duration, in the interests of the crew. Counting the three officers, there are seven of them who are deepwater men from the Middle West.

A.O.M. 2/c John B. Popp, Jr., 24, was a lathe operator in an Aurora (Ill.) steel mill before he joined the Navy.

Harvey Einhart is the kid of the crew, just 18. He chose war instead of finishing high school back in Clyde, Ohio. He is an A.M.M. 3/c and expert gunner like all the crew.

A.M.M. 2/c Robert Lagemann, 21, the flight engineer, was a farmer in Cook, Neb. A.R.M. 2/c Anthony Schwarber, 23, is a wireless operator as is A.R.M. 2/c Alfred J. Matthews, 24. Schwarber's home is at 4108 Lowry av., Norwood, Ohio. Matthews' home is at 18 West st., Milton, Mass.

Schwarber was a chemical mixer in a dye factory; Matthews was serving an apprenticeship in his father's contracting business.

A.M.M. 1/c John Bradford, 24, was a surveyor in Charlotte, N. C., before he became flight captain of reliable "B for Baker," our Lib, and its vital looker-outer. A.M.M. 3/c Earl Hibbs, 19, completed the crew. Somehow the gangly, Bristol (Pa.) boy crowds himself into the narrow quarters of the bow gunner.

And like all the bomber crews I have ever met, they are a team of damned good guys.

62 New Church Members Are Reception Guests

EDDINGTON, Apr. 20—Members and friends of Eddington Presbyterian Church gathered on Tuesday evening for a reception tendered the new members who have affiliated with the church during the past year.

The affair was held in the church house which was gallily decorated with spring flowers. The honored guests were seated at small tables in the center of the room.

The Gamble Concert Company, of Langhorne, provided delightful entertainment. The evening opened with prayer by the Rev. Arthur D. Sargis, after which words of welcome were expressed by C. Burnley White. Ernest Gamble then led group singing.

Mr. Gamble then favored with two solos: "Oh Give Me the Sword" from the opera "Runnymede," and "The Woeing." A duet was sung by the Misses Virginia Whyatt and "Betty" Donnelly, entitled "Carmena." As an encore they sang "Comin' 'Round the Mountain."

Two violin solos followed by Verna Paige, "The Old Refrain" and "Scotch Lullaby." Two soprano solos were rendered by Sylvia Merrill, "The Bell Song" and "Gentle Annie."

The gathering was addressed by the Rev. Mr. Sargis and Mr. White. "Perpetual Motion" and "A Wild Rose" were rendered on the violin by Verna Paige; "Summertime" from "Porgy and Bess," sung by Sylvia Merrill; "Shortcut," sung by Sylvia Merrill and Ernest Gamble.

The evening ended with the entire gathering singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name."

Refreshments were served. Sixty-two names have been added to the church roll during the past church year. They are: Mrs. Bessie E. Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. Reese Thomas, Jr., Nabel H. Mitchell, Mildred G. Underwood, PFC Patrick E. Dunlavey, Jr., Walter Dallas, A/S Robert W. Edelman, Jean M. Edelman, Joan M. Edelman, Joseph P. Edelman, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph P. Barclay, Ralph P. Barclay, Jr., Mrs. Charles G. Bauer, Mrs. Addie M. Schwinn, Florence D. Mitchell.

Edna H. Barclay, Mrs. Edwin G. Angell, Jean N. Angell, Mrs. Harry G. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace H. Chapman, Helen I. Beagle, S. L. Dorothy L. Wilke, Mrs. Joseph Ludwig, Cpl. Clifton E. Robtoy, William F. Kisters, Harry P. Kisters, Mrs. William Rhode, PFC Wilbur H. Smith, Jr., Mrs. Wilbur H. Smith, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Baas, Pvt. Harry V. Shapcott, Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Pedersen, Mr. and Mrs. David T. Lamb, August H. Haenchen, Hans Latkefodder, Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur McCloskey, G. Arthur McCloskey, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel G. Morrison, Samuel G. Morrison, Jr., Mrs. Carl Asberg, Emily Menzen, Mrs. Frank Garzigues, Mr. and Mrs. John Muller, Elizabeth L. Usdin, Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Hayes, Mrs. Anna E. Day, Carl Asberg, Mr. and Mrs. John Floyd Peters.

BASEBALL LEAGUE TO MEET

A meeting of the Bristol Suburban League will be held tonight at nine o'clock in St. Ann's club-house. President Paul Voltz will preside. The circuit is still seeking a fourth team, and applications will be received at the meeting tonight.

"pomes," and recess games kept things lively for the evening; and "Professor Moyer" decided he had the prize group of the nation's spellers when third grade words were given out with two dozen spellers shown to their seats in short order.

The affair was in the form of a reception for new members.

The men of the association provided the refreshments in the cafeteria, consisting of "hot dogs," sauer kraut and rolls, coffee, ice cream and crackers.

The business meeting was in charge of Mrs. Willard Bartoe, with Mrs. Charlotte Walsh in charge of records. Mrs. Herbert Rongley reported that a check for $97.71 had been received from the government toward the cafeteria meals. The serving of lunches will be discontinued after this month. John Crowley stated that suggestion had been made that housewives donate some canned goods to the cafeteria for next term. Charles Herman gave the report of condition of the treasury.

Howard Johnson, reporting for the maintenance committee, told that the electric stove in the cafeteria is in poor condition. It was further reported that some new elements have been ordered for the same. Ned Moyer, Roger Burns and Mr. Crowley also reported on the meeting of the maintenance committee with the school board. A committee of school board members was recently named to work with the P. T. A. maintenance committee in regards to cafeteria needs.

The association will sponsor a round-up next month for girls and boys who will commence school next September, a physician being engaged for the group check-up.

The association agreed to be represented on the Presidents' Council in this area. Mrs. Bartoe to represent the P. T. A. at sessions where various civic matters will be considered. The areas covered as Middletown Township; Hulmeville, Langhorne, South Langhorne and Langhorne Manor borough.

Proposed amendments to the by-laws were read by Mrs. Walsh. Named as a nominating committee, to report at the May session, are: Mrs. Roger Burns, chairman; Mrs. Walter Jackson and Frank Binder.

Tuberculosis Society To Have X-Ray Clinic

p. m. weekdays. The X-rays will be taken on Wednesday, May 3rd, at the Doylestown high school. Reports will be sent to the family physician.

Chest X-rays have hitherto been a rare luxury, but are now becoming everyday routine. No one in the 1920's dreamed that by 1944 X-rays of the chest would be taken at the rate of two a minute, millions a year.

The Society is finding two tubercular cases out of every 100 adults X-rayed. Tuberculosis is becoming an increasing war and post-war problem. The only way to discover early tuberculosis is to X-ray apparently healthy people, for early tuberculosis is apt to be without the familiar symptoms.

Tuberculosis is not inherited. People are not born with it. When there are several cases in a family, the germs have been passed from one who has the disease, by means of spitting, uncovered coughing or sneezing, or from objects handled by a tubercular person and thus peppered with germs.

Tuberculosis germs can live a long time away from the body, even after drying or freezing. But they don't multiply until they have a warm, moist place within our tissues. Sunlight kills them in a few hours, boiling in a few minutes, burning kills them at once.

Often people carry germs of tuberculosis, but with good resistance they never gain control. A time of lowered resistance allows the germs to sneak up silently.

Anybody can get tuberculosis, but nobody need get it. Tuberculosis is curable. Many more people recover from it than die of it. Neglect, ignorance, or delay make it a killer.

The fight is being won against tuberculosis. It used to lead as the cause of death up to the early 1900's. Now it is seventh. No sensible person, however, wants to be one of the 60,000 in this.

A Model is Murdered ~ BABS LEE

SYNOPSIS

A mysterious assassin cut short the gay career of Syria Verne, artists' model, just as she was answering the telephone in her penthouse apartment to which she had returned soon after midnight following a quarrel with Pierre Sturgis, art photographer. The police could find no gun, significant fingerprints, nor other evidence of an intruder. The evening of the murder, she had met an old friend, Argus Steele, author and former detective, in the Penguin Club where he was dining with Ellen Curtis, a model. Syria left, accompanied by Sturgis. Bill Carstairs, III, playboy, introduced his latest blonde, Dorry, to Ellen and Argus. Later, Ellen found Dorry in the ladies' room, weeping because her Bill "was phoning that awful Syria Verne again." Ellen noticed a snubbed revolver in Dorry's open purse. . . . Next morning, Ellen phoned Argus to tell him that Syria had been murdered. Police Inspector Grange visited Steele as the investigation got under way. Later, Ellen introduced Argus to Roger Flagg in the latter's model agency. Flagg invited Argus to examine his office files and Ellen acts as guide in showing Argus the routine and records of the model agency. They note Syria's chart; she had four appointments for that day, one of them with Pierre Sturgis.

CHAPTER TEN

Argus watched Ellen as she talked. There was a tonic quality in her very appearance, he thought. "Syria ever get chummy with any of the girls she worked with?" he asked.

"No. She was the silent, mysterious type."

"But she must've been seen around. I thought all these glamour girls were always being taken to fancy dives by fancy boy friends."

"She may have," said Ellen.

"Seems to me I did hear a rumor that Syria had some man on the string, but I never learned who it was—aside from Sturgis, of course."

"How was she liked generally?"

"The girls didn't understand her, but she wasn't exactly friendly with anyone," Ellen passed.

"I've been thinking about Dorry—you remember—the girl Bill Carstairs was with in the Penguin club? Ever since I heard about Syria's being shot, I've worried about that gun Dorry was carrying."

"Maybe she was going to use it on Carstairs," Argus suggested. "It would have been a temptation."

"She seemed plenty burned up about Bill's phoning Syria. Did the police mention either of them in connection with the murder?"

"No."

"A man with a camera under his arm approached them. In his wake was the indignant receptionist."

"Here!" she called. "You can't barge in here like that without Mr. Flagg's permission. What do you think this is?" The cameraman ignored her and smiled at Argus as though he were a bosom friend.

"I heard you were here, Argus,"

old boy," he said familiarly. Steele had never seen the man before. "I'm still on the Blade—you remember." He winked at Argus broadly. "I just want to get some shots of you with some of these models coming up behind him. The receptionist shrugged a gesture of hopelessness and returned to her duties."

"I've never seen you before, and I'm not at all sure that I'm going to work on this case," Argus said.

"Sure, I know. But give me a break, will you? I was sent up here to get a picture of the office and Mr. Flagg and the girls. I find you here—one of the greatest gun-shoes in the business. He turned, and he began to adjust his camera. "Now girls stand over here by Mr. Steele and sort of drape yourselves around. You too, sister."

He motioned to Ellen. She tried to hide a grin.

The girls clustered around Argus. "That's it," said the bulb-bomber. "Get closer. Look at Mr. Steele and smile. Put your arm around 'em, Mr. Steele." Two of them, a blonde and a brunette, snuggled against him. Argus frowned—a mock frown, to be sure.

"Look pleasant, Mr. Steele. Maybe you don't want any publicity, but think of these girls here. It's going to help their careers." He winked again.

"How's this?" Argus asked, grinning, his arms full of models.

"That's it," said the photographer. A flash bulb exploded in their faces. Argus blinked. The girls laughed.

"What's going on here?" Flagg asked, coming into the room.

"Just taking a few pictures for the Blade," the lens ranger replied.

"I'd like to get a shot of you with these models."

"Sorry," said Flagg. "Some other time."

"But, just one—"

"No," declared Flagg.

"Oke!" grinned the youth with a shrug. "Thanks, Mr. Steele," he said. "Much obliged, girls." He put away his camera and left.

"What time is it?" Ellen asked. Flagg glanced at his wrist. It was bare.

"I must've forgotten my watch today," he said.

"It's ten after twelve," answered Argus.

"I'll have to dash," said Ellen. "My appointment—Oh, by the way, you're coming to the fashion show this afternoon aren't you, Argus?"

It's at the Park Hotel at four. Meet me outside the models' dressing room and I'll give you a ticket."

"Now what would I do at a fashion show?"

"They are highly educational," said Ellen. "Aren't they, Roger?"

And besides, there are going to be some bathing-suit numbers."

"Well—in that case—" faltered Argus.

"I'll see you there, then," said Flagg. "I'm to be one of the judges."

As Argus came out of Flagg's building he saw Inspector Grange emerging from a police car several doors down the block.

"Well," said Argus, coming up to him, "this seems to be my day for

A Model is Murdered ~ BABS LEE

SYNOPSIS

A mysterious assassin cut short the gay career of Syria Verne, artists' model, just as she was answering the telephone in her penthouse apartment to which she had returned soon after midnight following a quarrel with Pierre Sturgis, art photographer. The police could find no gun, significant fingerprints, nor other evidence of an intruder. The evening of the murder, she had met an old friend, Argus Steele, author and former detective, in the Penguin Club where he was dining with Ellen Curtis, a model. Syria left, accompanied by Sturgis. Bill Carstairs, III, playboy, introduced his latest blonde, Dorry, to Ellen and Argus. Later, Ellen found Dorry in the ladies' room, weeping because her Bill "was phoning that awful Syria Verne again." Ellen noticed a snubbed revolver in Dorry's open purse. . . . Next morning, Ellen phoned Argus to tell him that Syria had been murdered. Police Inspector Grange visited Steele as the investigation got under way. Later, Ellen introduced Argus to Roger Flagg in the latter's model agency. Flagg invited Argus to examine his office files and Ellen showed Argus the routine and records of the model agency. They note Syria's chart; she had four appointments for that day, one of them with Pierre Sturgis. They agreed to meet later at a fashion show. Remodeling Garments
Challenges Homemaker

Every used garment is an individual problem when being remodeled. For this reason it is a challenge to the imagination and much more interesting than making a dress from several yards of new material.

"When you are ready to select your pattern, give it the thought it deserves," advises Edna R. Gray, University of Illinois college of agriculture. "In achieving style in dress, fitting is as important as design, and fitting begins in the pattern. Notice the shape of the pieces with which you will have to work. Jot down some of the measurements, if necessary. Allow plenty of time at the pattern counter. Read the information on the envelopes of the patterns in which you are interested. Examine the small cutting diagrams for each pattern to be found in the counter pattern books. Such study will usually tell you whether or not you can manage to cut that particular pattern from the material with which you are to work."

"If you think you may have to piece, look for a pattern which has small pieces and many seams. If you cannot find all the items you want in one pattern, look for two. For example, perhaps a coat of one and a skirt of another will suit your needs. Before buying two patterns, however, consider whether or not you might be able to alter the design of one pattern to make it like the other one. It is usually very easy to alter skirt designs. Do not expect to be able to follow any pattern in every detail. The principal structural lines, of course, should be followed or, at most, changed only slightly."

Expert Gives Seven Tips
For Extending Suit's Life

To make our suits wear longer, keep ourselves better-groomed, and to lend Uncle Sam more money for munitions, seven tips for pressing wool as an aid to clothing conservation have been outlined by Helen S. Butler, home economics extension representative.

Press on the wrong side; use two pressing cloths—one of wool, the other of muslin or heavy cotton. Put the wool cloth on the garment, over this lay the damp cotton cloth. Pass the iron lightly over the wet cloth, following the grain of the material, but do not iron heavily. Pressing is not ironing. Lift the cloths while the steam is still rising. Pat the garment into shape with the hands.

Hold the iron over thick places, such as pockets, so the moisture penetrates the fabric. Stop pressing before all the moisture has left the fabric. Pressing until perfectly dry may make the material shiny. Let the garment dry thoroughly before hanging in the closet or wearing.

Dairy Feed

With good pasture, one pound of grain mixture is needed for each three pounds of milk over and above 30 pounds produced daily by Holsteins, Swiss and Ayrshires, experts say. For Jerseys and Guernseys, one pound of grain mixture for each three pounds of milk produced over and above 20 pounds daily may be fed. In early spring a mixture of corn and oats, ground, is satisfactory, but as soon as grass approaches maturity, supplements should be used to bring the protein content of the mixture up to 15 per cent. As the grass ripens, cows will eat less of it and it will be necessary to feed grain mixtures at a heavier rate. If pastures become low yielding, some extra roughage, such as green crops, silage or hay, may be needed.

Moisture in Home Healthful

The proper amount of moisture in your home during the heating months not only is important from a health angle, but it also protects and preserves rugs, furniture, and clothing. "Dry skin" of which women complain so often during the winter can be traced in most cases to insufficient humidity in their homes. During these warlike times, humidity is doubly important, for moist air is easier to heat than dry air—it actually feels warmer at lower temperatures. Which means you will not consume nearly so much coal in heating your home.

Fats and Oils

Fats and oils embrace one of the most keenly competitive groups of commodities in modern commerce. Sources of supply are legion, ranging throughout the animal, vegetable and marine kingdoms. Though no two are identical, great freedom of substitution is possible. In fact, one of the major results of technology has been the increase in interchangeability of the various fats and oils. Their principal markets are provided by the food, soap, paint, and varnish industries.

USO Busy

USO average club attendance exceeds 15,000,000 a month; 760,000 volunteers assist at USO programs; 7,244,000 pieces of USO stationery are used by men in uniform, sleeping accommodations at USO clubs are used 238,300 times, 1,283,600 information services are given, 61,240 sessions of organized recreational and social programs are held, and 108,000 servicemen receive personal counsel.

PERKASIE FIREMEN
TO GET AMBULANCE

Large Sedan To Be Converted Into Vehicle for Ambulance Use

COST WILL BE $5,000

PERKASIE, Apr. 20.—Perkasie firemen, as well as the entire borough were agreeably surprised to learn that the Drive for a Community Ambulance had virtually attained its goal of $5,000 and in addition, a new 7-passenger Chrysler Imperial Sedan had been purchased, paid for and delivered to be converted into an ambulance. The equipment, necessary for the conversion, has been ordered and it is confidently believed that the ambulance will be put into service within thirty days.

This information was embodied in a report submitted at the monthly meeting of the Firemen. The Drive for $5,000 was begun on February 29th and the public response exceeded even the fondest hopes of the sponsors.

More than 80 per cent of the $5,000 has been received and there is every indication that with the big new car on display, new interest will be aroused and that by the time the ambulance goes into service the venture will be over-subscribed.

Twenty active members of the company are now in the armed forces and several interesting letters from firemen were read at the meeting.

On Monday evening twelve firemen collected more than five tons of waste paper in the first ward. The firemen appreciate the growing co-operation of residents in the collection of paper. Primarily, the project is purely a war effort, the proceeds go a long way in keeping the Fire Company treasury in a healthy condition. It was pointed out that the value of the paper collected Monday night exceeds $75.00. Residents are again reminded to watch for paper collection dates and tie their waste paper in bundles to facilitate collections.

President Bintzer appointed a committee to have charge of the ambulance and draft an operating schedule.

THE CAPITOL WHIRL

A Digest of Things Political Occurring At Harrisburg

By International News Service
HARRISBURG, Apr. 20.—(INS)—Although Gov. Edward Martin has received the assurances of Republican and Democratic leaders that political speeches will be avoided when the special session of the Legislature is convened May 1, the administration's desire for a harmonious meeting may be marred in another fashion. . . . Individual legislators may seek to place the Assembly on record with resolutions covering a variety of subjects. . . . The Governor's call, limiting the work of the Assemblymen, cannot be expanded but resolutions are not subject to this restriction. . . . A resolution was expected to be introduced calling upon the Federal Government to return control of the Unemployment Compensation Fund to the State. . . . The resolution probably will touch off some debate when introduced with Democrats lining up against adoption and the GOP supporting it.

Governor Martin's scrutiny of Federal payrolls and commitments have prompted him to report that there were 3,214,000 persons on U. S. Government payrolls in December 1943, an increase of 300,000 in 12 months. . . . "Today about one out of every 41 is a Federal employee and this does not include the men and women in the armed forces," he said.

The honor roll of 5751 State employees serving in the armed forces now bears 11 gold stars. The names are printed on large glass-covered plaques that stand in the rotunda beneath a huge service flag bearing 67 blue stars, one for each county and one larger star representing the State. . . . The Department of Property and Supplies keeps the record up to date.

A series of one-day "county institutes" to draft local postwar plans have been planned by the Institute on Municipal Postwar Planning in cooperation with county commissioners. . . . Officials in the Department of Internal Affairs, which has supervised the Institute's conferences, expect the State group will meet to draft a master postwar plan for Pennsylvania. . . . The last of the regional meetings sponsored by the Institute will be held in Pittsburgh April 27 for western Pennsylvania Planning Agencies.

The Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, AFL, has rounded out 42 years of progress and claims the affiliation of 1100 labor unions and central labor bodies with a combined membership of 325,000 workers. . . . The Union was organized at Scranton in 1901 when charter members elected Hugh Frayne, of Scranton, president. . . . One of the first bills sponsored in the Legislature prohibited the employment of under-age youth in and around mines for more than eight hours a day and another making it a misdemeanor for unauthorized persons to wear union buttons.

EVERYONE USES THE CLASSIFIEDS

The Bristol Courier's classified columns form a clearing house of opportunities . . . opportunities for the seller to move his merchandise quickly and economically . . . and opportunities for those who wish to buy to find a market surely and without fuss or bother.

If you've lost something, don't hire a bloodhound to find it . . . use the efficient, direct Courier classified section.

If you have property you want to rent or sell, do it the effective way . . . through a Courier classified adv.

If you have a legal announcement to make, put it where everyone will see it . . . in the Courier classified columns.

Don't wear yourself out trying to find a market for your articles . . . for a few cents you can run an adv. in the Courier classified columns.

Got something you want folks to know about? You can reach the most people for the least money through a Courier classified adv.

You can place a classified advertisement in the Courier for one day for as little as thirty cents. There's no mystery or hocus-pocus about putting in a classified . . . Pick up your phone, dial 846, and tell your story to the Ad Taker. Then sit back and wait for results.

Ideas For the Low-Point Menu

"O" stands for oranges
And ration points zero,
Answers the question—
"What to eat? Oh, dear, oh!"

"L" stands for lemons.
They "lift up" the flavor.
It's wartime, but menus
Can still keep their savor.

A cook's tour these days brings disappointments. Foods you planned to use just aren't on the grocer's shelves. Or they take points and you're resolved to use as few points as possible because you are backing the nation's no-point, low-point food campaign. For you are Mrs. America, technical mess sergeant and cook and baker, first class, on the home front, planning culinary strategy to win health for your family in appetizing food.

What will you do, when you cannot find the foods you want? Change your campaign plans, of course, and use something else. Oh yes! It's hard to do but it's your part of winning the war. And there's a satisfaction in attaining an objective, military or culinary.

A rule that's easy to follow is to plan meals around as many as possible of the fresh fruits and vegetables the markets display. They do not take ration points and they add health to your family's diet. The year 'round orange and lemon, for example, can be used to make meals more interesting, either served by themselves or with other foods. Lemon helps to perk up flavor and is a handy stand-in for that hard-to-find bottle of catsup or salad dressing.

The Government has asked us to use certain foods that are especially plentiful this spring. Among these are cabbage and eggs. Suggestions follow for the use of these foods with the healthful and flavorful citrus fruits.

California Cote Shaw

2 cups orange pieces
2 cups shredded cabbage
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon mustard
1 cup evaporated milk

Peel oranges and cut in pieces, to make 2 cups. Best for this purpose are the firm-meated seedless California oranges. Combine oranges with cabbage, which has been finely shredded. Mix lemon juice, salt and mustard. Stir slowly into milk. Use as a dressing for

This dressing is a good sour cream dressing for other salads.

Lemon Cake Top Pudding

2 tablespoons flour
1/2 cup sugar
1 tablespoon margarine
2 eggs, yolks and whites separated
1/2 cup lemon juice
1 cup milk

Cream flour, sugar and margarine. Add beaten egg yolks, lemon juice and milk. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in an 8-inch unbuttered pudding dish or in individual custard cups, set in a pan of warm water. Bake 35 minutes in over 350 degrees to 375 degrees F. Will form a cake top with a layer of custard below. Serves 4 to 6.

This pudding can be made into a pie. Pour the uncooked mixture into an 8-inch pie shell, which has been baked 5 minutes in a hot oven

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning—sometimes those things mean something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

DOWN ON THE FARM

enter the army. Subsequently he was assigned to the Raritan Arsenal. A short time later his father, Charles E. Benson, appeared. "I couldn't run the farm without you," he explained, "so I sold it." Then the elder Benson went out and got a job so that he could be near his son.

INDIANA—(INS)—Dr. Ralph Heiges, dean of Indiana State Teachers College, has warned that a belief that U. S. Economic and British political policy were the basic causes for the Pacific war was already taking root in America and that such a notion inclined toward a negotiated peace with Japan.

SHOPPING TIPS FOR BUDGETEERS

LET HIM BLOOM this springtime! True, his clothes generally are getting brighter and brighter, but ties are still his principal opportunity for expressing his love of color. He should have a double rack to meet his needs, set a keynote for his day.

The Snellenburg Tie Department (1st fl.) is famous among men, and the prices are from high to low. Imagine some very special ties of the moment—every one hand-colored—at a mere 55c each! Foulards, paisleys, stripes, checks, solids, splashes. Buy him half a dozen while they last.

LET 'EM RIDE! They're here again—full-size bicycles for boys and girls! The child who can ride a bike lets off steam in the right direction, breathes more deeply, has a better disposition. The Bicycle Dept. (3rd fl.) of the Snellenburg Store has some very special $27.88 models for a limited time. Made by the maker of famous Columbia bicycles, too! All in accordance with Government regulations—sturdy construction, steel frame throughout, coaster brakes, streamlined fenders, double inner-tube tires. Rationing ticket required for each.

HOUSECOAT ETIQUETTE. A housecoat can be glamorous or slovenly. The rule is to have at least three in personally becoming colors, and in lines that are particularly fetching. Some of the many other models at various prices in this well-known department? The prettiest housecoat grows monotonous if seen too often.

HIS PIN-AFORE GIRL can be you. Oddly enough, the men like the informality of these pretty, sleeveless, ruffly things. The Snellenburg Apron Dept. (2nd fl.) has some particularly fetching ones of printed and checked cottons for a mere $1.79. Wear them over dresses, for protection, or wear them without dresses for a feeling of freedom and coolness—but wear 'em. If you're in the teens or early twenties, they'll bear street-wearing. Some of these Snellenburg models have sweetheart necks, heart-shaped pockets, bowed sashes! Charming!

AUTOMATIC NURSE! A simple play-pen is the greatest of help to mothers of creeping or just-walking children. Some nice roomy ones, very special, can be had in the Infants' Furniture Dept. (2d fl., Chestnut St.) of the Snellenburg Store. I hope you young mothers and grandmothers are in time for one. Even if your "babies" are top you by inches, isn't there some mother of little ones you know who can't afford to buy a play pen? If or early twenties, they'll bear street-wearing. ## CARPATHIANS AGAIN PLAY HISTORIC ROLE

Passes Have Been Doorways
For Destiny In Europe

USED AS A REFUGE

By International News Service

WASHINGTON, D. C., Apr. 20.—(INS)—What part will the Carpathian Mountains play in determining the fortunes of war?

As the Russians drive the German invaders back toward their own lands, the moving armies face the green heights of the Carpathian basin, a mile-high natural wedge that forced the Germans to divide their armies defending the Balkans.

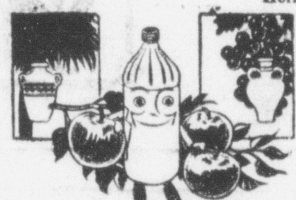

Yet, it is as a refuge rather than as a barrier that the Carpathians have made history, says the National Geographic Society. Plains dwellers have found haven in the hills when beset by enemies. Individual peoples have found a new home in the broad and fertile valleys.

Nature herself put a question mark on the face of Europe when the Carpathians were shaped.

Beginning near Vienna, on the Danube, the ridges of the Carpathians curve northeastward, then southeastward and southwestward in a broad, sweeping arc back to the Danube at the Iron Gate, 350 air miles down stream from Vienna. From tip to tip the rocky curve traced by the mountains north of the Danube is nearly 900 miles long.

Vintage Vinegar

Ancient and honorable is the record of vinegar in history. The Egyptians, living along the fertile Nile that cradled our first civilization, regarded vinegar with mystic awe. To them fermentation was a god-like symbol—one of the mysteries of life itself.

The Hebrews knew two kinds of vinegar: The sour wine mentioned often in the Bible, and another made from honey and the juices of the palm. Hippocrates, the golden-aged Greek who fathered modern medicine, prescribed vinegar for many illnesses. And when the bubonic plague ravaged Europe in the middle ages, vinegar was used widely as a cure.

Ancient alchemists, working with vinegar to learn the secrets of fermentation, formulated some of the first principles of modern chemistry. And at one time vinegar was even used for making extracts of some important drugs.

The kinds of vinegar that man has made have differed widely with the ages. Some was made from grapes, some from honey, others from grains and palms. Our own distinctly American type, known as cider vinegar, was the product of our richly-laden apple orchards. Man used the makings that he had at hand, but make vinegar he always did. For the uses of vinegar were legion.

Most important, though least spectacular of all, is the use of vinegar to keep and cook our food. "Pickling" we call it in this country. And our traditions are replete with the full pork barrel steamed in pickle below the cellar stairs, jars of pickled fruits and vegetables, the pickled fish, the pickled venison and hare. We just naturally have a taste for vinegar on foods. For good vinegar not only helps preserve food, but it also tenderizes and adds a piquancy and rare bouquet as well.

Here are several recipes to prove the point:

Pennsylvania Porkers

Season—
6 pork chops, 1 inch thick (1 lb. 6 oz.)
with—
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper.

Making up the "hook" of this question mark of mountains are the West Beskids, the Tatra ridges, the East Beskids, the Wooded or Forested Carpathians and the Transylvanian Alps.

A cluster of countries and principalities that have changed hands over and over again in Europe's wars touches the Carpathians. Inside the "hook" are Slovakia; Hungary; Carpatho-Ukraine (annexed by Hungary in 1939); Transylvania; and the Banat of Timisoara, added to Romania after World War I. Outside are Austria; Moravia; Poland; Bucovina (transferred to Romania by Austria and later occupied by Russia); Moldavia and Wallachia, included in the original Romanian union of 1859.

The world was old when the Carpathians were upheaved. Mammals were developing. Plants were rising to the highest orders. The age of man was yet to come. New mountains were the fashion. The violent convulsions that lifted the Carpathians also raised the Alps, the Pyrenees, and the Apennines.

Not so high as the Alps, the Carpathians have no peak that tops 10,000 feet; few that rise above 6,500 feet. Less showy than the Alps, as well as lower, they are short on sculptured summits, sizeable snowfields or glaciers, mountain lakes, and high waterfalls.

Masses of weathered stone stand alone as lofty, bare-faced peaks in the West Beskids and Tatra ridges. Oak and beech grow up to 4,000-foot levels; spruce, fir, and pine thrive up to 6,000 feet. Long, wavy stretches of flowery highland pastures top steep, tree-clad slopes that bound narrow, terraced valleys. Loess, the wind-blown silt from many glacial grindings, coats the high valley, gives farmers the bounty of a loamy top soil.

Passes through the Carpathians have channeled the course of civilization, conquest, and commerce. Have affected the use and settlement of land. Gateways leading through the eastern and southeastern mountains linked the Russian steppe lands and the Moldavian platform on the east with the Transylvanian and Hungarian areas in the west. Passes through the northern arc connect the headwaters of the Tisza and the Dniester, provide international lines of communication. Passes have determined the route patterns of railways.

Molded Vegetable Salad, Mocha Froth Co-Star As Easy-To-Serve Hospitality

A molded salad and a tempting beverage are an easy-to-serve menu for hospitality that fits into busy wartime schedules. Whether your guests are war workers or the younger set celebrating a farewell, it's good hostess strategy to make your beverage of decaffeinated coffee so everyone can relax, eat and enjoy extra cups with a light heart. Remember that, to bring out its rich coffee flavor, decaffeinated coffee needs from 15 to 18 minutes "perking." You can offer your guests a choice of either hot or cold decaffeinated coffee, pouring the hot infusion on ice cubes for those who prefer the cold version.

A molded vegetable salad is a good choice for the supper menu mainstay. If you expect a busy day —for you can get it ready hours ahead of time and tuck it away in the refrigerator, to be unmolded on a bed of lettuce just before serving. To give added nourishment, serve deviled eggs as a garnish or co-star the salad with a generous supply of egg sandwiches.

It's no trick to get salad out of the mold. Hold it for a few moments in a pan of warm water. Then invert the serving plate on the mold, turn over, lift one side of the mold and give it a gentle shake—and it will come off.

Percolated Coffee
Use one rounding tablespoon all-purpose grind decaffeinated coffee for each cup (½ pint) of cold water. Pour cold water into pot of percolator. Set percolator basket in pot and put coffee in it. Cover.

Let percolate slowly and gently 15 to 20 minutes, or longer than ordinary coffee to obtain full strength of decaffeinated coffee. (For a four-cup percolator, use ¾ cup coffee.)
Vegetable Salad Aspic
1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup warm water

3 to 4 tablespoons vinegar and cold water to make 1 cup
½ teaspoon salt
Dissolve lemon-flavored gelatin in warm water. Add vinegar and cold water and salt. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in 1 to 2 cups cabbage, celery, pimiento, and pickles. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with mayonnaise. Serves 6.

KNOW YOUR STATE

In Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, Pennsylvania has two of the ten largest cities in the Nation. No other state has two cities among the first ten. This does not mean, however, that Pennsylvania's population is unduly concentrated.

Pennsylvania has also more small cities and towns than any other state. It has five cities of 100,000 or more, eleven with a population of between 50,000 and 100,000, twelve between 25,000 and 50,000, seventy-five between 10,000 and 25,000, 112 between 5,000 and 10,000, 140 between 2,500 and 5,000, and in addition contains 640 towns and villages of less than 2,500 population. The Keystone State has also a larger number of people residing in small towns than is true anywhere else in our Nation.

We commonly think of New England as a section of our country notable for the number of its towns and villages, but in the number of places under 10,000 Pennsylvania has five and one-half times as many—the exact numbers being 892 such communities in Pennsylvania and 162 in all New England.

It might be concluded from these figures that Pennsylvania's population dwelt entirely in cities, towns and villages, but this would be far from true. Only Texas has as great a rural population as the industrial Commonwealth of Pennsylvania where 2,728,085 were living in unincorporated territory at the time of the taking of the 1940 Census.

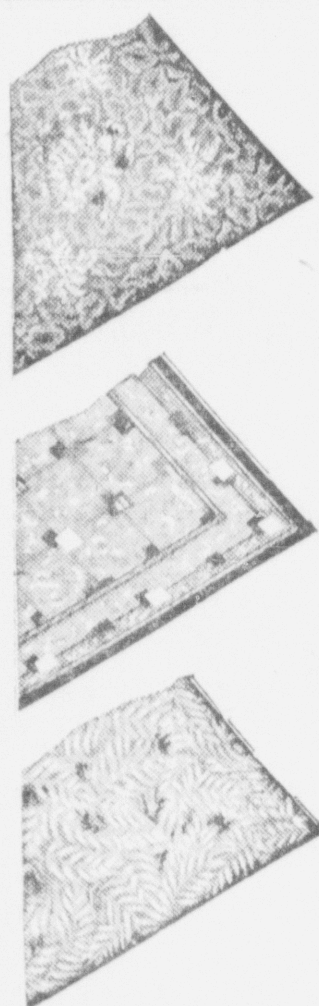

CARLISLE—(INS)—Capt. Leonard L. Cowley, of St. Paul, Minn., now stationed at the Carlisle Medical School, likes to tell the story of what happened when he was stationed at a foreign base. Imagine his surprise, he said, when an English transport landed and out stepped the King of England, General Montgomery and General Alexander for a routine inspection of North African bases.
